GEORGII II,

Magnae Britanniae Regis,

MEDICO CELEBERRIMO,

ROBERTUS AINSWORTH

S. P. D.

POSTQUAM hoc opus, ante quatuor abhinc luſtra inceptum, haud ſine magno quidem labore, multiſque vigiliis, ad finem nuper perduxeram, quem potiſſimum patronum nuncuparem, ad cujus clientelam fidemque in illo edendo me reciperem, tum demum cogitare coepi. Splendidiſſimum certe ac graviſſimum, qui et obſcuritati meae lucem adferret, et opus ipſum aliorum approbationi commendaret, omnino neceſſarium eſſe plane videbam. Talem igitur mihi optanti, et cogitatione quaerenti, tu, vir clariſſime, primus merito occurrebas. Tanta eſt enim tui nominis fama et auctoritas, tantaque tua in humaniores literas earumque cultores benevolentia; ut omnes fere ad te, tanquam ad commune aliquod perfugium, et unum hodie Maecenatem, cujus ope et favore adjuventur et protegantur, undique ſe conferant. Quot autem praeclarorum auctorum opera conſiliis et hortationibus tuis in rei literariae commodum ſint edita, norunt jam docti, nec poſteritas ignorabit. Teſtis erit vicecomes nobiliſſimus, idemque philoſophus acutiſſimus, Baconus; qui nuperam ſcriptorum ſuorum editionem benignis tuis auſpiciis acceptam referet: teſtis vir eruditiſſimus, et dum vixit mihi amiciſſimus, Edmundus Chiſhull; cujus praeclari et elaborati Aſiaticarum inſcriptionum corporis alterum volumen ipſe in lucem emiſit, alterum a tua in manes ejus pietate expectatur: teſtis etiam illuſtriſſimus Jacobus Auguſtus Thuanus, recentioris aevi hiſtoricorum facile princeps; cujus egregia opera, ſplendore tanto ſcriptore digno exornata, haud ita pridem in publicam utilitatem prodierunt. Sed cur his aliiſque id genus multis diutius immorer, quae jam vulgo celebrata omnium cognitioni ſunt expoſita?

IGNOSCES igitur, ſi et ipſe quoque, tot tantiſque tuis in bonas literas meritis incitatus, huic noſtro Latinae Linguae Theſauro, quem eruditorum arbitriis in praefatione permiſerim, non decus tantum et ornamentum, ſed et quaſi praejudicium quoddam, tuo hominis laudatiſſimi nomine praefixo, comparare vehementer exoptem. Cum ſciam enim felices eſſe artes, quoties de iis judicent artifices; ſi tu mihi judicando adfueris, de eventu minime torquebor. Ne autem infra dignitatem tuam argumenti tenuitas videatur, neutiquam ſane mihi timendum eſt. Ita enim ſtudiis gravioribus, omnibuſque philoſophiae inſtitutis, unde ſubſidii aliquid ad medendi ſcientiam comparari poſſit, penitus imbutus es; ut iis etiam artibus, quibus ad morum elegantiam dicendique facultatem via aperitur, mentem pariter habeas excultam, quarum amoenitatibus te haud raro oblectas. Hinc, ut nobilis ille Aſclepiades, M. T. Ciceronis medicus et amicus, utroque uteris Apolline, et tam orando vales, quam medendo. Omnis autem eloquentiae fontem et originem verborum eſſe proprietatem, cujus accurata praeceptio lexicorum proprium eſt munus, quivis harum rerum periti ultro fatentur. Quapropter nec principes noſtri opera hujuſmodi, ſacro ſuo nomini dicata, ſereno vultu accipere dedignati ſunt.

Alias virtutes tuas eximias memorare hic non aggrediar, quae ſatis per ſe cognitae nullo praeconio, nedum noſtro, indigeant. Quid, quod vota mihi fere praerepta eſſe videntur? Quid enim tibi tot ingenii et fortunae dotibus ornato voveam? Divitias? dedit, cumulateque dabit Hygia tua. Magnatum, regiſque ipſius auguſtiſſimi gratiam et amorem? tenes: nullum enim certius amoris pignus, quam fides; nulla certior fides, quam vitae ſalutiſque tutela. Gloriam, et immortalem nominis memoriam? id Muſis erit curae, quas tam inſignite demereris. Quidnam igitur reſtat, quod tibi ad hoc felicitatis culmen evecto comprecer; niſi ut Deus benigniſſimus te ſalvum et incolumem, quo diutiſſime ea fruaris, nobis conſervare velit? voletque, ſi Britanniam noſtram amet, bonorumque omnium votis annuere dignetur. Vale, vir praeſtantiſſime, et ad clientum tuorum numerum me adſcribe. Dabam ipſis kalendis Martiis, anno Dom. MDCCXXXVI.

HUNC librum non tam in uſum veſtrum, quam puerorum in ſcholis diſcentium, paratum, ad manus veſtras cito tamen perventurum, non erat unde dubitarem. Omnes enim patres et tutores, qui filiis et pupillis ſuis cupiunt, ipſique ſint linguarum rudes, ſi ſapiant, in hujuſmodi libris comparandis vos in conſilium adhibituros ſatis ſcio, potius quam Soſios, quorum eſt nonnunquam librum malum oſtentando vendere, bonumque elevando ſupprimere. Veſtrae itaque exiſtimationi, veſtro certiſſimorum et aequiſſimorum judicum arbitrio, ſtandum mihi aut cadendum video; neque auctoritatem veſtram defugio, ſi non tam quae feci, quam quae facere volui, ſimul in judicium adhibueritis; illa enim mihi ipſi vix placent, haec animi mei conſcientia effecit, ut nunquam ſint diſplicitura. Sin autem eveniat, ut utrorumque pariter habita ratione, ſententiis veſtris cadam, multum certe dolebit; reliquum tamen erit, quo caſum caſuſque dolorem conſoler, nempe reipublicae literariae, cui uni ſtudebam, interfuiſſe ut caderem. Cauſam igitur operis ſuſcipiendi primum, deinceps ſuſcepti exequendi conſilium et rationem, paucis quam poſſim, exponam; quo fiet, ut quid ſuſceperim, ad quid collineaverim, quatenus attigerim, vel a fine mihi praeſtituto aberraverim, unde certius procedat judicium veſtrum, appareat.

SED quinam ego ſim, de quo judicium ferendum eſt, ſi forte quaeſitum fuerit, quanquam in judiciis non quis, ſed quid, rectius inquiritur, eloqui neutiquam pigebit; meque ludi olim privati, nunc multos annos emeritum, moderatorem fuiſſe ſciatis. De aliis neſcio, me profecto quidem non tam movet pervagatiſſimus ille verſus, qui vetat artem pudere proloqui, quam factites, quam ordinis utilitas pariter ac dignitas; cum vitae in hoc dulci curriculo paene confectae jucundiſſima etiam nunc ſit recordatio.

DE me ſatis: nunc quae me cauſa ad hunc moleſtiſſimum laborem moliendum impulerit, altius repetam. Sic igitur habete. Cum adoleſcens admodum ſcholam aperuiſſem, nondum uſu edoctus quam viam ingredi, nedum inſiſtere, oporteret, quaedam ex patria lingua in Latinam pueris identidem, quae ad grammaticae praecepta exercenda potiſſimum valere judicavi, dedi traducenda. In his exercitationibus perlegendis non perinde ſaepe in grammatica, atque in verborum et locutionum delectu, peccatum inveni. In cujus rei cauſas propius intuenti compertum eſt, aliam ductu meo, ut in hos errores incurrerent, accidiſſe, qui eis prius lexica utenda dediſſem, quam ex auctorum lectione et obſervatione aliquem ſaltem verborum delectum habere poſſent: aliam autem lexicographis tribuendam, qui in ea praecipue parte, qua patria Latinis verbis praeponuntur, verborum et locutionum ambiguitates in utraque lingua occurrentes diſtinguendo atque explanando non ſuſtuliſſent; aut voces rei ſignificandae ſatis idoneas, alteram alteri linguae aptantes, non ſuppeditaſſent; aut aptis et accommodis pro dignitate, ac ſi omnes pari eſſent jure ac ordine, ſedes ſuas non dediſſent. Saepe etenim accidit, ut, ubi plura verba rem eandem denotantia pueris tradunt, ea, quae ſunt medii ſeculi, prima in lexicis noſtris teneant; puriſſima vero et lectiſſima quaeque in media, nonnunquam etiam in ima loca detrudantur. Hinc fit, ut, cum pueri nullam certam delectus faciendi, quem Caeſar apud Ciceronem eloquentiae originem vocat, cynoſuram habeant, mirandum non ſit, ſi in ſcopulos, inſolentia dico cum eodem Caeſare verba, ſaepiſſime offendant. Sed ut tam ab errore meo, quam lexicographorum, pueris caverem, aliam aliquandiu viam inſtiti, quam eo tempore neſciebam an quiſquam alius; nempe ut lectiones breves ex probis auctoribus ſemel atque iterum, nonnunquam tertium quoque et quartum, diſcipulis meis praelectas, et quam potui claris et uſitatis verbis explanatas, in linguam patriam vertendas praeciperem, verſaſque deinceps ſine lexicorum vel auctoris ope (removi enim) in Romanam iterum vertendas, idque ipſiſſimis auctoris ſepoſiti verbis atque ordine, quantum memoria complecterentur, traderem. Nec ſane fuit, quare hujus incepti me poeniteret. Hinc enim primum effeci, ut attentiores dictatis meis haberem, quo facilius penſum abſolverent, et in utroque ſtilo indies proficerent, quid alter alteri diſtaret, et quatenus recederet, clarius perſpicientes; tum ut a pravo verborum et locutionum uſu illos abducerem, et ad utriuſque linguae puritatem viam ſternerem, et munirem; poſtremo, quod non leve habet momentum, ut aſſidua hujuſmodi exercitatione memoriam acuerem et confirmarem.

CUM hanc autem inſtituendi rationem cum aliquot mei ordinis viris communicaſſem, probabant plerique, ita tamen ut domeſticae doctrinae utiliorem, quam publicae, judicarent; in utraque vero pueris lexica praebenda omnes cenſebant. Haec tamen auctiora, diſpoſitiora, et limatiora optabant; optabant quidem, ſed qui manum ſuam auctui, diſpoſitioni, et limaturae admoveret, repertus eſt nemo. Tandem cum nemini obtrudi potuit hic labor ingratus, neſcio quo fato, ſive rei autem, ſive temporis, habeatur ratio, certe iniquiſſimo, in me recepi; non quo appoſitiorem me, noveram enim quam eſſet curta mihi ſupellex, quam alium quempiam mediocri ſaltem ingenio, ad penſum exiſtimarem; ſed quo viam hujuſmodi operis feliciter ad ſummum perferendi certiorem, in uſum juventutis noſtrae, cui inſerviendae aetatem impenderam, monſtrarem et praeſtruerem. Nulla etenim alia huc perveniri poſſe perſuaſiſſimum habebam; et quanquam vires meae eſſent infirmiſſimae, credebam tamen habere me portiſculum, quo valentiores alios validioribus remis incumbentes, hoc curſu et certiore et breviore ſibi monſtrato, felicioribus auſpiciis in Latium navigare hortarer et excitarem. Poſſe multa ad meliorem profectum in lexicis noſtris addi, demi, mutari, pro diverſa temporum ratione docent illa, quae ex linguarum et artium intermortuarum curatione ad tempora noſtra ſcripta fuerunt; et quidem debere in illa potiſſimum parte, qua Latinis verbis patria praeponuntur, fluctuantis linguae noſtrae ratio monet, poſtulat, flagitat, ſi vel noſmet alios, vel alios nos intelligere velimus. Quot enim verba, et nonnunquam in deterius, hoc, quo vivimus, ſeculo, partim aliqua, partim nulla neceſſitate cogente, mutata ſunt? quot, poſthabitis noſtris, quae ſive proprietatis, ſive compendii, ſive ſoni virilis magiſque genti noſtrae accommodi, habeatur ratio, ex levioribus gentibus civitate noſtra donavimus? quot ejuſdem generis, ut deſueta et abolita, excluſimus? quot alia, quam proximo ſeculo, notione uſurpamus? quot etiam locutiones deſuetae, vel cum aliis mutatae fuerunt? Multa quoque in ea parte, qua Latinis verbis vernacula poſtponuntur, addi, demi, et mutari pariter debere, tam veterum ſcriptorum libri lexicographorum temporibus nondum reperti, quam vocabula prius non audita ex MSS collatione in lucem prolata, oſtendunt.

A literis poſtliminio redeuntibus lexica noſtra, alia aliis pro temporum ratione copioſiora et emaculatiora prodierunt, inter quae praecipue meritiſſimo Littletoni opus, ſed ab aliis auctum, per ſexaginta plus minus annos in ſcholis tritum emicuit; non tamen tam uſquequaque perfectum, ut nihil poſterorum diligentiae ſit relictum. Poſſe enim emendari, errores partim ex incuria nati; partim qui in opere longo ex taedio non poſſent non obrepere, et quos humana parum caveret natura; partim denique in alterius linguae locutionibus alteri accommodandis, quod ſane arduum eſt munus, et vel mediocriter obiiſſe, non veniam, ſed laudem inſuper meretur, plane demonſtrant: poſſe etiam et locupletari in eadem parte, tum ex verbis plurimis, quae auctore adhuc ſuperſtite uſu trita fuerunt, praetermiſſis; tum ex eis, quae plurima ex illius tempore in fluctuantem linguam noſtram recepta fuerunt, abunde manifeſtum eſt: potuiſſe et in ſecunda parte docuerunt doctiſſimi Cantabrigiae alumni, qui reverendi viri opus excoluerunt, praecipue in literis L, M, N, O, et P, adeo accurate, ut in illa, qua inſtiterunt via, non multa magni momenti aliorum induſtriae reliquiſſe videantur. Expertus dico; poſt plurimum enim ſtudii operaeque impenſum, quantulum illic, prae reliquis literis, praeſtare poſſem, tandem inveni, praerepta nimirum et praeoccupata ab illis facultate. In hac itaque vindemiae parte pauca quaedam, quae ex feſtinantium manibus exciderant, collegi; et pauciora, quae ex pampinis racemariis magno labore meo decerpſi. Ideoque non vinitoris hic, nec vindemiatoris, ſed racemantis nomen ſolum in me competit; neque quicquam ultra depoſco, niſi quod hanc quoque, ut caeteras partes, propriis ſuis corbibus diſpoſuerim, aliquid ſaltem mihi deberi quis aequus agnoverit. Sane ſi tantum in caeteris literis, quantum in his, praeſtitum fuiſſet, hominis faſtidioſi, vel nimium ſibi tribuentis, eadem via quidquam conari, videri poſſet. Sed cum ſe res aliter haberet, eſſetque inſtituti mei alia moliri, aliamque a lexicis noſtris in vocabulorum notionibus diſponendis et ordinandis inſtare viam; etſi in his opera mea minus poſſet, in reliquis tamen literis non inutilem fore confidebam.

SED quae in hoc opere praeſtiterim, praeſtare certe volui, reſtat breviter ut exponam. In prima parte primum et praecipue adnitendum duxi, ut patriis noſtris verba Latina lectiſſima et uſitatiſſima reſponderent, antiqua et inſolentia notarentur, et in delectu habendo ſua auctori cuique ſervaretur dignitas; ut omnes nimirum, qui ante M. Tullium ſcripſerant, vel illo adhuc florente, vel defuncto, in oratione ſoluta ſcripſerunt, illi poſthaberentur; idemque honos in ſtricta Virgilio et Horatio haberetur; atque adeo aliis, pro ſuo cuique merito, ſive oratoribus, ſive poetis: deinde ut labentis Latinitatis auctores, qui proximo ab his ſeculo, adeo brevis in perfecto eſt mora, ſcripſerunt, media tuerentur; lapſaeque in ima loca rejicerentur: denique ut verba Graeca purioribus ſaltem Latinis loco cederent, et aſteriſco, uti vocant, notarentur.

IN ſecunda parte curae fuit, ut verbis Latinis eorumque ſignificationibus ſua itidem conſtaret auctoritas, non certa modo, ſed et praecipua, reliquis ordine ſuo ſubjectis; ut cuique notioni nota barbara praefixa notae ſuae reciprocae reſponderet; ut quae ſunt in purioribus auctoribus ſemel tantum, vel rarius uſitata, notarentur, quo pueri ab his, cum uſitatiora ſuppeditant, arcerentur; ut vocabulis Graecis, quae in caſtiſſimis auctoribus Latinis nonnunquam reperiuntur, eodem vel ſimili ſenſu Latinum, ſi occurrat, ſubjiceretur; atque, ut in ſumma dicam, ut quaſi Latinitatis cribrum eſſet hic liber, propiuſque ab indice auctorum purioris aevi abeſſet.

DE tertia parte, qua ea fere continentur, quae communia habeo cum aliis lexicis, quicquam dicere ſuperſedeo, cum ſtatim ad oculum pateant.

CUM haec et alia plura majoris momenti in accommodandis ſignificationum exemplis mihi exequenda propoſuiſſem, libro huic THESAURO nomen dedi, ad exemplum doctiſſimi viri Roberti Stephani, quem potiſſimum ducem, quoad licuit, in ſupellectili Latina ſequi volui. Etenim cum ille univerſae Latinae linguae auctores, tunc temporis notos, cujuſlibet ſignificationis a ſe adductae, in eruditorum uſum, quo magis eam confirmaret, advocaverit; ego eundem finem, dummodo omnes verborum ſignificationes, quas ille habeat, retinerentur, et aliae, quae ex aliis, praeſertim vero ex B. Fabri utiliſſimo opere, addi poſſent, adferrentur, in juventutis noſtrae gratiam, obtineri poſſe arbitratus ſum. Quid enim tot opus eſt teſtibus, cum unus atque alter, quorum fides minime laborat, ſint inſtar multorum? Sane ad puram locutionis Romanae facultatem conſequendam in ſermone ſoluto pluris eſt M. Tullii, C. Caeſaris, et T. Livii, et in ſtricto Virgilii, et Horatii, teſtimonium; quam reliquorum paene omnium. In principum theſauris non tam κειμήλια πολλὰ, quam ἐσθλὰ ſpectari ſolent; et in hoc ipſo, de quo ſermo eſt, ut elocutionis Romanae principis verba huc deflectam, non numerari, ſed appendi, voces oportet. Quocirca, ut in omnium verborum ſignificationibus exemplorum paucitas pretio penſaretur, non ſolum ut ex optimis quibuſque auctoribus delectus illorum fieret, ſed inſuper ut ſingula virtute aliqua pollerent, hoc eſt, ut vocem ὁμώνυμον, aut συνώνυμον, aut utramque, quod ſaepe fit, continerent; aut ſi haec non ſuppeditarent, ut conſecutionem et conjunctionem verborum, vel φράσιν, quam Fabius elocutionem vocat, complecterentur; aut ſi nihil eſſet horum, ut in illis, vel ſub illis, proverbium aliquod, adagium, vel ſaltem aliqua ſententia in moribus aut artibus utilis appareret, nullo labore meo abſterritus, ſtrenuiſſimam operam dedi. Sin autem prolixius eſſet exemplum, quam ut commode adduci; aut magis involutum, quam ut ſatis apte contrahi poſſet; aut nomen unius tantum ſignificationis eſſet, animalis puta, plantae, herbae, et alia; omiſſis verbis, auctoris librum, caput, ejuſque diviſionem, appoſitis notis barbaris, adjicienda curavi.

HAEC omnia dum meditarer, aliaque, quae plura apud populares meos praefando expoſui; dumque, ut altera alteri linguae μεθόδῳ hactenus intentata concineret, intentus eſſem: adeo non eſt mirandum, ſi in errores nonnunquam inciderim; ut magis eſſet mirum, ſi non incidiſſem. Monita autem, et obſervationes quaedam accuratae, viro eruditiſſimo et amiciſſimo, Joanni Wardo, Greſhamenſi eloquentiae profeſſori, quem in dubiis haud raro conſului, accepta referri debent. Sed vos, judices, quo eruditiores et candidiores, eo in his ignoſcentiores futuros ſpes bona animo meo inſidet; multa enim primo tentamini condonari ſolent, multa debent. Quae peccant alii, qui in laudandis auctorum ſuffragiis de loco ſilent, ea tutius peccant. Quem enim tam feriatum credere eſt, ut univerſa Ciceronis opera ſit lecturus, quo certiſſime dicat illum hac vel illa verbi ſignificatione, de qua in dubium venit, non uſurpaſſe? quod tamen ad convincendum neceſſarium foret. THE PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

AS dictionaries in general, if compiled even with tolerable care and judgement, are of great ſervice to learning, eſpecially when digeſted in an exact alphabetical order, for the readily turning to whatſoever the conſultor's occaſion may require in that ſort of literature, to which they are peculiarly adapted: ſo they are capable of continual improvements, either with regard to the corrections proper to be made on a careful reviſal and mature conſideration of what was done before; or to ſuch additions, as on experience may be found neceſſary towards rendering them perfect. That this particularly hath been the caſe in reſpect of thoſe purpoſely deſigned to promote the knowledge of the Latin and Engliſh tongues, will ſufficiently appear by a ſhort review of the ſeveral dictionaries of that kind publiſhed amongſt us, which I ſhall now beg leave to lay before the reader.

PROMPTORIUM parvulorum ſive clericorum, printed by Richard Pynſon in the year MCCCCXCIX, in folio, is the firſt book of this ſort I have ever met with. This conſiſteth only of one part, which exhibiteth the Engliſh words before the Latin, being deſtitute both of the Latin, and hiſtorical parts. But theſe defects were in part ſupplied by ORTUS vocabulorum, alphabetico ordine fere omnia, quæ in Catholico, Breviloquio, Cornucopia, Gemma vocabulorum, atque Medulla grammaticæ ponuntur, cum vernaculæ linguæ Anglicanæ expoſitione, continens, printed by Wynkyn de Worde in the year MDXVI, in quarto. This is compiled in two diſtinct alphabetical parts, in the former of which the Latin words are placed before their explications in Engliſh, in the latter the Engliſh words are put before the Latin. The declenſions and genders of Latin Nouns, as well as the conjugations and preterperfect tenſes of the Verbs, are ſet down very particularly both in the dictionary before mentioned, and in the Engliſh part of this work.

THE Vulgaria Roberti Whitintoni Lichfeldienſis, printed in MDXXV, Vulgaria Stanbrigi in MDXXIX, and Vocabula magiſtri Stanbrigii in MDXXXI, ſcarcely deſerve to be mentioned in this place, being rather a ſort of vocabularies than dictionaries of the Latin and Engliſh tongues.

THOMAS ELYOT alſo obliged our countrymen with the publication of a Latin and Engliſh dictionary, printed at London in the year MDXLII, in folio, with the title of Bibliotheca Eliotæ, which ſeemeth to be much more copious than any of the former. This author was born of a knightly family in Suffolk, received part of his education at Oxford, then travelled beyond the ſeas, and on his return was introduced to court. King Henry VIII finding him to be a perſon of good parts, conferred the honour of knighthood upon him, and imployed him in certain embaſſies beyond the ſeas, particularly to Rome about the divorce of queen Katharine, and afterwards to the emperor Charles V, during which laſt his great friend and chrony Sir Thomas More was beheaded. He died in March MDXLVI, and was buried at Carleton in the county of Cambridge. But the editors of the late edition of Stephens's Latin Theſaurus, for what reaſon I know not, ſay, that Elyot was primus qui has literas inter nos profeſſus eſt. Præf. fol. 20.

THOMAS COOPER, being ſenſible of ſeveral defects in the dictionary publiſhed by Sir Thomas Elyot, took no ſmall pains in improving it; for, beſides his giving a much fuller account of the different ſenſes of the Latin words, he added 33000 words and phraſes; the materials, for the moſt part, being taken from Roberti Stephani Theſaurus, and Johannes Friſius's Latin and German dictionary, ſaith Anthony Wood in the ſecond edition of his Athenæ Oxonienſes in MDCCXXI. This work paſſed through ſeveral editions; the firſt was at London in MDLII, which ſtill retained the name of Elyot; but it was afterwards reprinted with large improvements in MDLXV, with the title of Theſaurus linguæ Romanæ et Britannicæ, &c. and again in MDLXXVIII, as alſo in MDLXXXIV, which laſt is eſteemed the beſt. It may not be amiſs to obſerve, that both Elyot's and Cooper's dictionaries want the Engliſh part, proper to aſſiſt younger ſcholars in tranſlating Engliſh into Latin, though they have the hiſtorical and poetical part. This reverend author was born at Oxford, and afterwards elected into a fellowſhip of Magdalene college there. Queen Elizabeth had ſo great an eſteem for him on account of the ſervice he had done to learning by the publication of this uſeful work, that ſhe promoted him to the deanery of Glouceſter in MDLXIX, to the biſhoprick of Lincoln in MDLXX, and to that of Wincheſter in MDLXXXIV, where he ended his days 29 April MDXCIV.

BARRET's Alvearie, or quadruple dictionary in Engliſh, Latin, Greek, and French, was printed at London in the year MDLXXX, in folio. The author of this work having been imployed ſeveral years in the inſtruction of youth, and obſerving the Latin dictionaries of his times to be very defective in giving proper aſſiſtance to younger ſtudents, chiefly for tranſlating Engliſh into Latin, made a large collection both of words and phraſes out of the claſſic authors to ſupply their defects in this particular, with a deſign to publiſh them to the world; but being prevented by death, this work was afterwards publiſhed by a friend of the author. As this hath gone through but one impreſſion, ſo far as I can find, I need ſay no more of it, than that it ſeemeth to be a valuable performance for thoſe times.

THOMAS THOMASIUS, who was for ſome years printer to the univerſity of Cambridge, and died 9 Aug. MDLXXXV, publiſhed alſo a Latin and Engliſh dictionary, in quarto; which met with ſo favourable a reception, that it underwent five impreſſions in the ſpace of eight years, and bore in all fourteen impreſſions, ſay the editors of the laſt edition of Stephens's Theſaurus. I have not been able to procure a ſight of the firſt edition of Thomaſius, and therefore can neither determine the preciſe time of its firſt appearance in the world, nor aſcertain the number of its parts, when firſt publiſhed; but that ſome diſtinct parts were added to the following editions, will evidently appear by a recital of part of the title to the tenth edition thereof in MDCXV, printed by Legat, who ſucceeded him as printer to the ſaid univerſity: Huic etiam (præter dictionarium hiſtoricum et poeticum, ad prophanas hiſtorias poëtarumque fabulas intelligendas valde neceſſarium) noviſſime acceſſit utiliſſimus de ponderum, menſurarum, et monetarum veterum reductione ad ea, quæ ſunt Anglis jam in uſu, tractatus. Decima editio ſuperioribus cum Græcarum dictionum, tum earundem primitivorum adjectione, multo auctior. Cui demum adjectum eſt ſupplementum, authore Ph. Hollando, med. doctore, nova aliquot dictionum millia complectens; una cum novo Anglo Latino dictionario. Hence we may obſerve, that how imperfect ſoever the former editions of this book were, yet this conſiſted of the three chief parts, into which moſt of the Latin and Engliſh dictionaries publiſhed ſince that time have been divided.

PHILEMON HOLLAND, who made the ſaid ſupplement to Thomaſius's dictionary, was born at Chelmsford towards the latter end of the reign of king Edward VI, educated in Trinity college Cambridge, was afterwards, for about twenty years, maſter of the free ſchool at Coventry, after that practiſed phyſic in the ſame county, and departed this life 9 Febr. MDCXXXVI. This ſupplement is printed diſtinctly from the other parts of that book, and called Paralipomena, as containing ſuch Latin words as the doctor had gleaned from claſſic, and other Latin authors, and were omitted by Thomaſius.

JOHN RIDER, born at Carrington in Cheſhire, educated in Jeſus college Oxford, for ſome time miniſter of S. Magdalene Bermondſey in Southwark, then rector of Winwick in Lancaſhire, and promoted to the biſhoprick of Killaloe in Ireland in the year MDCXII, where he continued to his death, which was in MDCXXXII, publiſhed a dictionary, Engliſh and Latin, and Latin and Engliſh, at Oxford in MDLXXXIX, in a large thick quarto. This, ſaith A. Wood, was the firſt dictionary that had the Engliſh before the Latin, epitomizing the learnedeſt and choiceſt dictionaries that were then extant, and was beheld as the beſt that was then in uſe; but that part of it, which had the Latin before the Engliſh, was ſwallowed up by the greater attempts of Francis Holyoake. But that Mr. Wood was miſtaken in this caſe, if he meaneth, that Rider's dictionary was the firſt which conſiſted of an Engliſh and Latin part, as well as of the Latin and Engliſh, plainly appeareth by what is ſaid before in my account of the Promptorium, as well as of the Ortus vocabulorum; though, ſo far as I can find, Rider's was the firſt Latin dictionary, in which the Engliſh part was placed at the beginning of the book, before the Latin part.

FRANCIS HOLYOAKE, who was born at Nether Whitacre in Warwickſhire, educated in Queen's college at Oxford, afterwards kept a ſchool in his own country, and was made rector of Southam there in MDCIV, took conſiderable pains in reviſing, correcting, and augmenting what Rider had publiſhed, eſpecially with regard to the etymological part; this was firſt printed at London in MDCVI, in quarto, and was afterwards reprinted ſeveral times with enlargements. He died 12 Nov. MDCXXXII.

THOMAS HOLYOAKE, his ſon, who was born at Stony Thorp, near Southam before mentioned, educated in Queen's college Oxford, was rector of Whitnaſh in Warwickſhire, and prebendary of the collegiate church of Wolverhampton in Staffordſhire, made very large additions to the dictionary publiſhed by his father, with a deſign to print them in a new edition; but dying 10 June MDCLXXV, the ſame was publiſhed by his ſon Charles, of the Inner Temple, London, in a large and well printed folio, in MDCLXXVII.

NICOLAS GREY likewiſe made ſome additions to Rider, which were ſeveral times printed at London, ſaith A. Wood; but the ſame author owneth himſelf at a loſs as to the time of its firſt publication, and addeth, that a ſecond or third edition of Holyoake*'s coming out, prevented, as it is ſaid, the further publication of it*. This gentleman was born in London, elected ſtudent of Chriſt Church Oxford, from Weſtminſter ſchool, in the year MDCVI, and was afterwards the firſt maſter of the Charterhouſe ſchool in London; but, after ſome years, marrying, againſt the ſtatutes of that houſe, the governours thereof diſcharged him from that imployment, by preſenting him to the benefice of Caſtle Camps in Cambridgeſhire. In January MDCXXIV he was admitted chief maſter of Merchant Taylors ſchool in London, and in MDCXXXI chief maſter of Eton, out of which he was expelled in the time of the civil wars; but being reſtored on the return of king Charles II, he died at Eton towards the cloſe of the year MDCLX, and was buried in the chapel there.

CHRISTOPHER WASE, fellow of King's college in Cambridge, and afterwards ſuperior beadle of law in Oxford, publiſhed likewiſe a Latin dictionary, the ſecond edition of which was printed in MDCLXXV. This is a compendium of Calepine, but done with ſo much judgement, ſaith Dr. Littleton in his Latin preface to his dictionary, that one can hardly find any thing in it which ſavoureth of barbariſm. However, it ſeemeth to be rather deſigned for the uſe of thoſe who have made ſome proficiency in the Latin tongue, than for ſuch as are only beginning to learn that language.

FRANCIS GOULDMAN, who was educated in Chriſt's college in Cambridge, was for ſome time rector of South Okendon in Eſſex, and died in MDCLXXXIX, publiſhed alſo a Latin dictionary in quarto, in the year MDCLXIV, which was afterwards reprinted ſeveral times, and the Cambridge edition in MDCLXXIV much enlarged by William Robertſon. But Gouldman's deſign, according to the account of Dr. Littleton, his ſucceſſor in this ſort of learning, was rather to make new additions, than to correct the former miſtakes, or to throw out the many barbarous Latin words which had crept into the dictionaries then extant. For this reaſon

Dr. ADAM LITTLETON undertook to reform it; whoſe greateſt aim, as he tells the Engliſh reader in his preface, was to carry the purity of the Latin tongue throughout, and not to take things or words upon truſt, ſo as to tranſcribe others miſtakes. This was firſt publiſhed in quarto at London in MDCLXXVIII, and hath met with ſuch a general approbation, that the ſixth edition thereof was publiſhed but a few months ago. He was a miniſter's ſon, of an ancient and genteel family at Weſtcot in Worceſterſhire, elected ſtudent of Chriſt Church in Oxford in MDCXLVII, was ſome time an uſher in Weſtminſter ſchool, and in MDCLVIII became ſecond maſter of the ſame. After the reſtoration he was chaplain to king Charles II, rector of Chelſea, and ſubdean of Weſtminſter. He died in the beginning of July, MDCXCIV, and was buried in Chelſea church.

THE Cambridge dictionary in quarto, printed in MDCXCIII, with the title of Linguæ Romanæ dictionarium luculentum novum, is an improvement of Littleton, made by ſeveral perſons, whoſe names have been concealed from public knowledge. What plan the editors of this have proceeded upon may be learnt by their own preface; in which, after a grateful acknowledgement of the great aſſiſtance they had by the extraordinary pains of the reverend and learned Dr. Littleton, as to the Engliſh Latin part, they principally ſet forth, that they have inſerted ſeveral whole claſſes of words, which had been either omitted before, or were very lately introduced into our language; and that they have been more exact, more diſtinct and full, in noting the various ſignifications of Verbs and Nouns: that in the Latin-claſſic they began their collection by a careful peruſal of ſeveral authors, as Lucretius, Terence, Cæſar, Phædrus, Gratius, Petronius, &c. ſome of whom they obſerved had ſcarce been named, or if ſometimes quoted, often to very little, and ſometimes to very bad purpoſes, in dictionaries of the ſame volume with theirs; that the ſecond edition of Robert Stephens's Latin Theſaurus lay always before them, and was conſtantly conſulted by them; that they likewiſe uſed a manuſcript collection in three large folio's, digeſted into an alphabetical order, made by Mr. John Milton out of all the beſt and pureſt Roman authors; and further, that the complete indices generally annext to the Dauphin editions of moſt of the Roman writers had been very ſerviceable to them; that they had retrenched many far fetched etymons in former dictionaries, had given a larger account of the conſtruction of Verbs, had rejected all words and phraſes, whoſe authors were either not to be found, or, when found, appeared in ſo barbarous and uncouth a dreſs, as made them very unfit company for Tully, Cæſar, &c. And finally had diſtinguiſhed the poetical Latin words by a flower [✠] placed before them. Thus far they. Thoſe who are deſirous to have a more particular account of the difference between this dictionary and that publiſhed by Dr. Littleton, as to the Engliſh and Latin part, may ſatisfy their curioſity by the compariſon of a few ſheets of each; but it is very manifeſt, that theſe editors have made very large and uſeful improvements in the letters L, M, N, O, and P, in the Latin claſſical part, and augmented or corrected what had been done by Littleton (though neither in ſo large nor careful a manner as under the aforeſaid letters) in moſt of the other parts of the work." The improvements made under the aforeſaid letters, as alſo a large part of their title, as well as the preface, have been inſerted in the ſeveral editions of Littleton (except the laſt, which hath a new preface, and hath been otherwiſe ſomewhat altered) printed ſince the publication of this work at Cambridge; but the other parts of Littleton in general remain as they were, when firſt publiſhed.

ELISHA COLES publiſhed alſo a Latin and Engliſh dictionary in the year MDCLXXVII, deſigned chiefly for the uſe of ſcholars of a lower claſs. He hath indeed conſiderably enlarged the Engliſh Latin part, which containeth many more Engliſh words and phraſes than any Latin dictionary publiſhed before his time. But not a few of thoſe words are now intirely obſolete, many of them interpreted in a wrong ſenſe, and worſe tranſlated into Latin. And the Latin Engliſh part is very defective both with regard to the ſeveral ſenſes of the Latin words, and the citation of the Roman writers proper to fix their authority. This work however, being not half the price of Dr. Littleton's, hath gone through twelve impreſſions, the firſt whereof was printed in a ſmall quarto, and all the following in octavo. The author of this work was born in Northamptonſhire, entered into Magdalene college in Oxford in the year MDCLVIII, taught the languages to foreigners in the pariſh of Covent Garden in London, and was afterwards for ſome time an uſher in Merchant Taylors ſchool; after which, on ſome default being obliged to quit that imployment, he went into Ireland, where he continued till his death; but of the preciſe time thereof I have not been able to get any certain information.

HAVING exhibited this ſhort hiſtory of our Engliſh and Latin dictionaries, I ſhall now proceed to give the public a faithful account of the motive which chiefly induced me to undertake this tedious work, and of the ſeveral ſteps I have taken in the proſecution of it.

THE motive which principally engaged me in this undertaking, and ſupported me under the fatigue of conſulting the many books neceſſary for carrying it on, was an earneſt deſire of contributing all that lay in my power to the preſervation of the purity of the Latin tongue in our grammar ſchools. For having obſerved, in the courſe of years I was imployed in the inſtruction of youth, very many miſtakes, with regard to this particular, in all the Latin dictionaries which fell into my hands, as well as their numerous defects and omiſſions of Engliſh words and expreſſions; and that theſe writers have generally been more ſtudious of making additions to what had been printed before, than of reforming the errors, and rejecting the many barbarous Latin words, thus introduced into dictionaries, as well as regardleſs of a matter of great importance in this affair, namely, the making the Engliſh and Latin parts to tally with each other: I thought it would be a proper imployment for me to beſtow ſome pains in attempting to give better aſſiſtance to the Britiſh youth, while converſant in theſe ſtudies, than hath as yet appeared in public. This deſign, I think, could never be perfectly accompliſhed by the plan our dictionaries have all proceeded on, either in citing no Roman authors as vouchers to the truth of what they deliver, or of citing them only in ſo general and looſe a manner, as hardly ever to refer to the particular book, chapter, or verſe, by which the more curious and accurate perſons may be able to judge of the truth or falſity of the ſenſes by them given to Latin words, or of their authority amongſt the claſſic writers. For this, and other reaſons, I have proceeded in a method differing in ſeveral reſpects from all the Latin and Engliſh dictionaries, which have hitherto been publiſhed amongſt us.

BUT as the following work conſiſteth principally of THREE diſtinct parts, with ſome ſmaller appendages annexed to two of them, I ſhall now give an account of each part ſeparately, in the ſame order as they are placed in the book.

I. THE firſt part repreſenteth the Engliſh words and phraſes before the Latin, being deſigned to aſſiſt learners in tranſlating whatſoever may be written or ſpoken in our tongue into proper Latin. To anſwer this end, "It ought to "contain all words and forms of ſpeech commonly uſed in Engliſh, with ſuch Latin words and expreſſions annexed to "them, as may fairly be ſupported by the authority of the Roman writers, commonly called claſſics; and ſuch as denote, "as near as the nature of the two languages, and the different cuſtoms of both people, will admit, the ſame ideas and "conceptions of the things deſigned to be conveyed by them." For miſtakes in any of theſe caſes muſt be attended with ill conſequences to the learner, who is not able to judge for himſelf.

ABOUT forty years are elapſed, ſince any perſon hath publiſhed a new Latin and Engliſh dictionary amongſt us, or attempted any thing conſiderable for adjuſting the ſaid two languages the one to the other; in which interval our mother tongue hath been much altered, or refined, and will indeed be always fluctuating, whilſt the liberty is indulged, either of introducing into it new words and forms of expreſſion from our neighbouring countries, or of coining new ones amongſt our ſelves. It muſt therefore be thought neceſſary that our Latin dictionaries, which are chiefly deſigned for the inſtruction of youth, ſhould keep pace with thoſe alterations or refinements; for otherwiſe the perſons who ſtand moſt in need of this ſort of books, either by reaſon of the tenderneſs of their years, or their neceſſary application to ſtudies of a different nature, will be deprived of a great part of that advantage they may juſtly hope to receive from them.

In order to ſupply the defects of former Latin dictionaries in this reſpect, whether occaſioned by the variations made in the Engliſh tongue, or by the overſight of the compilers of thoſe books, I have endeavoured to collect, in the following work, all the ſingle words I could meet with now commonly uſed as Engliſh words. Some of theſe could not be known to the compilers of thoſe dictionaries, as being very lately brought into uſe amongſt us; ſuch as, alert, dupe, furlough, ſtockjobber, ſhamade, &c. But it muſt be acknowledged, that many others of common uſe, even at the times when thoſe authors wrote, have been by them entirely omitted; ſuch as,

acceptation,
acclivity,
accomplice,
accuracy,
acquieſcency,
actuate,
an advertiſing,
afflictive,
alcove,
aleconnor,
alleviate,
alleviated,
alleviation,
amazing, ſignifying wonderful,
amazingly,
amplitude,
amply,
apologiſe,
application, ſignifying diligence,
apportioned,
to appraiſe,
an appraiſer,
an appraiſement,
aqueous,
argumentative,
armorial,
around,
arrangement,
artleſs,
aſlant,
aſſemblage,
aſſiduous,
aſſiduouſly,
aſſignable,
aſſimilated,
atheiſtical,
atrocious,
attainable,
attainment, in the ſenſe of a man of good attainments,
attended,
attenuated,
audaciouſneſs,
avowedly,
awfully,
awfulneſs,
awkwardneſs;

with many others under the ſingle letter A. From hence the public may form a tolerable judgement of the improvements made in this reſpect under all the remaining letters, in each of which I have taken equal care to inſert in the following work all ſuch ſingle Engliſh words of common uſe, as I could meet with on a diligent ſearch made for that very purpoſe.

Under this head may be alſo comprehended many technical terms in philoſophy, botany, phyſic, painting, mathematics, heraldry, and ſeveral other arts and ſciences; ſuch as air pump, barometer, apetalous, chicken pox, attitude, contraſte, ſecant, tangent, theodolite, and torteauxes; all which may be undoubtedly ſerviceable to ſome perſons, and yet, ſo far as I can poſſibly find, now make their firſt appearance in an Engliſh and Latin dictionary.

Besides theſe there are ſeveral other terms, which, though of an inferior claſs, yet, being of common uſe, ought to have been inſerted; as,

advance guard,
advance money,
after reckoning,
after clap,
ſtatute of bankruptcy,
benefit of clergy,
bludgeon,
boarding ſchool,
buckler of beef,
chance cuſtomer,
cherry brandy,
diſpenſing power,
entertaining diſcourſe,
foul copy,
gill ale,
perſpective glaſs,
houſe double and ſingle,
houſe warming,
a man of good invention,
the kerb ſtone of a well,
to make a lodgement in a ſiege,
miſprint,
organ builder,
pounce,
quarter ſeſſions,
a good or ill run in gaming,
a run in traffic,
a ſcrape, or troubleſome buſineſs,
a ſham plot,
a ſtanding diſh,
ſtanding forces,
ſpunging houſe,
a ſeat, or ſcene of action,
to publiſh a book by ſubſcription,
a tally man,
a tiff, or ſmall quantity of liquor,
a toſted beauty,
the running title to a book,
a wafer for ſealing letters,
whiting;

with very many more, too tedious to be here repeated.

But a compleater collection of ſingle Engliſh words or terms, commonly uſed in any art or profeſſion, is not the chief thing wanting in this part of our Engliſh and Latin dictionaries; they are much more defective in certain forms of Engliſh ſpeech uſually called phraſes. Theſe, as they are much more difficult to be tranſlated into another language, than ſingle words or terms generally are; ſo they ought with greater care to be inſerted in all performances of this nature. As therefore the ſingle words and terms fell under conſideration in the courſe of the alphabet, care hath been taken to inſert the moſt common forms of ſpeaking or writing in Engliſh appertaining to each; which method may be of ſingular advantage to thoſe who have occaſion to conſult this book, in directing them readily to tranſlate into good Latin ſeveral others, of a near affinity to theſe herein mentioned, which they may ſome time or other have occaſion for, but were too numerous to be all inſerted; as under

ACCOUNT,
to adjuſt, balance, make even, or ſettle accounts,
to learn to caſt accounts,
to caſt up his accounts, in order to know the ſtate of them,
to caſt up his accounts, or vomit,
to call one to an account on ſuſpicion of ſome ill practice,
to call one to an account concerning expenſes,
to give an account of what a perſon hath done in any affair,
to give an account of an affair, or rehearſe the manner in which it was tranſacted,
to paſs an account,
to place to account,
to ſtate an account,
to take an account of;

under AFFECTION,
to bridle the affections,
to gain, or win the affections of a perſon,
to loſe the affections of a perſon,
to move the affections by ſpeaking;

under AFFRONT,
to receive an affront,
to put up an affront;

under APPLAUSE,
to gain applauſe,
to ſeek applauſe;

under APPRENTICE,
to bind, or put apprentice,
to ſerve an apprenticeſhip,
to be out of his apprenticeſhip;

under AUTHORITY,
to be in authority,
to cite, or quote authorities,
to do a thing of one's own authority,
to excel in authority,
to give an authority to a thing,
to put in authority;

under BAIL,
to accept, or admit to bail,
to demand bail,
to except againſt bail,
to give, or put in bail,
to ſave himſelf and his bail;

under BARGAIN,
to buy a bargain,
to ſell a good bargain,
to ſtand to one's bargain;

under BATTLE,
to give an enemy battle,
to provoke to battle,
to gain a battle,
to loſe a battle,
to run the hazard of a general battle,
to preſent themſelves in order of battle;

and ſo of a great number of others. And this is done not only in Nouns, but Verbs alſo; as,

under BEAR,
to bear an office,
to bear arms as a ſoldier,
to bear arms, or a coat of arms,
to bear the charge of,
to bear one company,
to bear date,
to bear hard upon,
to bear an impreſſion,

to bear a grudge,
to bear in mind,
to bear the loſs of a thing,
to bear great affection to one,
to bear a proportion to,
to bear a reſemblance, or likeneſs to,
to bear rule, or ſway,
to bear ſuch a ſenſe;

under BEAT,

to beat out of countenance,
to beat up the enemy's quarters,
to beat, as the pulſe,
to beat in upon, as rain,
the clock beateth well, &c.

The number of theſe phraſes, and the different applications of the ſame words to expreſs various meanings, under ſome heads is very conſiderable; as, for inſtance, in the word

HAND,

to hand a thing from one to another,
to hand a thing down to poſterity,
to bring one up to one's hand,
to bring one's hand in for working,
to buy a thing at the beſt hand,
to come tap in hand to one,
to drop out of one's hands,
to let drop out of one's hands,
to fall into one's hands,
to fall in hand with a thing,
to be in hand with a buſineſs,
to be under the doctor's hand,
to bring up a child by hand,
to get a thing into one's hands,
to get the upper hand of one,
to give one the upper hand,
to go from the buſineſs in hand,
to guide the hand of one learning to write,
to lay hands on one,
to lay a thing out of one's hands,
to pay money in hand.

And under RUN above threeſcore expreſſions, very common in our tongue, may be found in this work, of which no notice hath been taken in any other Engliſh and Latin dictionary.

THESE being generally rendered into Latin by ſuch phraſes as occur in the Latin claſſical part, learners will not only be more eaſily furniſhed with variety of Latin phraſes correſponding to the Engliſh ones, than they could be by the help of common phraſeological books; but the two parts of Engliſh Latin, and Latin claſſical, are by this method made more conformable to each other, and the true ſenſe of the Latin phraſes will be more eaſily imprinted on the mind, which by frequent uſe will become familiar, and be an ornament to the Latin compoſures or tranſlations of our Britiſh youth.

AS many both of the ſingle words and forms of expreſſion are uſed in different ſenſes, and to denote various ideas; ſo, unleſs theſe ſenſes be accurately diſtinguiſhed, and explained in a manner ſuitable to younger capacities, they will be apt to chooſe ſuch Latin words in tranſlating their ſchool exerciſes, as are no ways adequate to expreſs the meaning of the Engliſh; and muſt inevitably be guilty of many miſtakes, which might be prevented, were they furniſhed with proper aſſiſtance by their dictionaries, in a clear explication of the different meanings of the words and expreſſions they may have occaſion to tranſlate. I have therefore not only retained all ſuch diſtinctions as appeared to me to be already done with judgement by others, but have added alſo ſeveral new ones under all words capable of ſuch variations. Theſe explications of the different ſenſes are included between crotchets, marked thus [ ]; and this generally is done in an alphabetical order with reſpect to the firſt word in the explication, that the conſultor's eye may be more readily directed to the ſenſe he wanteth. Almoſt every page containeth ſeveral inſtances of theſe different ſenſes of the ſame Engliſh word, but the curious will be better able to form a judgement concerning the improvements of this kind, by comparing the words following with the accounts given of them in other dictionaries;

addreſs,
allow,
bubble,

MOREOVER, explications in crotchets are ſubjoined to all Engliſh words, in which I apprehended there could be any difficulty to young learners; as alſo to all the technical terms, and antiquated expreſſions, which it was thought proper to inſert in this part.

A MUCH greater number of Engliſh proverbs, which likewiſe may be of ſome uſe, are inſerted here, than can be found in any other book of this ſort now extant.

AS alſo, in compliance with cuſtom, the active and neutral ſenſes of Engliſh Verbs are more fully and clearly explained.

IN ſo large a collection of Engliſh words and expreſſions, ſome, no doubt, will occur, which are not of the politeſt ſort, and therefore exceptions may be taken at their being inſerted in a book deſigned for the aſſiſtance of young gentlemen in their ſtudies of polite literature. But if the real deſign of an Engliſh and Latin dictionary be duly conſidered, according to the rule before propoſed, namely, to teach perſons how to tranſlate into claſſic Latin all words and forms of ſpeech commonly uſed in Engliſh, and not to fix the goodneſs or badneſs of the Engliſh; as alſo, that the difficulty of tranſlating the more vulgar expreſſions is much greater, than of thoſe uſed in politer diſcourſe; I perſuade myſelf the perſons who make ſuch objections, will ſee ſufficient reaſons to juſtify the inſertion of them.

WHAT hath been already ſaid, may, as I conceive, be ſufficient to convince the reader of the numerous deficiencies in all our Engliſh and Latin dictionaries now extant, with reſpect to their collections of Engliſh words and forms of expreſſion, and of their great omiſſions in accurately diſtinguiſhing the different ſenſes of the ſame word or phraſe; to ſay nothing of the many uſeleſs and utterly antiquated terms they are ſwelled with in this part of their works, nor of the wrong turns they have given to many words, which now at leaſt bear a quite different meaning. I ſhall therefore proceed to conſider

2. HOW far our Engliſh and Latin dictionaries have anſwered the true deſign of ſuch books, with regard to the Latin words and phraſes annexed to the Engliſh ones; which, according to the rule before laid down, ought to be ſuch, "as may fairly be ſupported by the authority of the Roman writers, and ſuch as denote, as near as the nature of the two " languages, and the different cuſtoms of both people, will admit, the ſame ideas and conceptions of the things deſigned " to be conveyed by them."

A CRITICAL review of a few pages of the beſt of our Latin and Engliſh dictionaries, that printed at Cambridge, may be of ſervice to give the reader a true repreſentation of this matter. The editors of this book have theſe words in their title, Among which latter (the Latin annexed to the Engliſh in the firſt part of their edition) no word or expreſſion is admitted, but what is claſſic, and of an approved authority; and in their preface aſſure the reader, that they had not only read, but weighed and conſidered every line and word in that whole collection. This is ſo ſtrong an aſſurance of accuracy, that one would be unwilling to ſuſpect the truth of the aſſertion; but had I, upon a careful examination, found it to be ſtrictly true, I ſhould hardly have given myſelf the trouble of compiling a new Latin dictionary, or of deſiring the public to peruſe, without prejudice, the following remarks on little more than the firſt two pages of the Engliſh and Latin part of the dictionary publiſhed by them.

To abaſh, or make aſhamed, Pudefacere, confundere, rubore ſuffundere.] That the firſt of theſe Latin words cannot fairly be ſupported by the authority of the claſſic writers, even in their own opinion, may be concluded from their entirely omitting it in the Latin claſſical part. The ſecond Latin word, confundere, is indeed interpreted in this ſenſe in the Latin claſſical part of that work, but whether, taken abſolutely, it can be ſupported by the authority of the claſſics, may very much be queſtioned, as the reader may ſee more fully in my account of it in the Latin claſſical part of this work. It had therefore been more adviſeable, for fear of tincturing younger minds with falſe ideas, to have omitted it here, and have put only what I have done, Ruborem alicui incutere, rubore aliquem ſuffundere.

To abate one's courage, Reprimere animum, percellere, tondere criſtas.] That animum frangere or percellere are uſed in this ſenſe by the pureſt Roman writers, I believe can admit of no doubt. But I do not remember ever to have met with tondere criſtas in any claſſic writer.

Abatement of a writ [Abatamentum] exceptio dilatoria, actionis abolitio.] This being a term peculiar to the law, may be well enough rendered into the Latin adapted to that profeſſion, and therefore I take no notice of the barbariſm in abatamentum, a word frequently met with in our common law books, nor of exceptio dilatoria, which, though not claſſical, is commonly uſed to expreſs this meaning by the civilians; but I cannot forbear to obſerve, that actionis abolitio muſt have been firſt inſerted without due care; for how can actionis abolitio anſwer the idea of abatamentum, which is rightly explained in their law Latin part to be, when, upon ſome default, the plaintiff's ſuit ceaſeth for a time?

An abatement, or intruding, Intruſio.] This Latin word is not in their claſſical part, neither intruſor, which is annexed as proper Latin for the next following Engliſh word. If it be ſaid, by way of excuſe, that theſe are law terms; I aſk, why the † prefixed to ſeveral law terms in this very page of their book, and to an abatement in heraldry, though that be an eſtabliſhed term among the profeſſors of that ſcience, is not prefixed to this?

An abbeſs, Abbatiſſa.] This word in their claſſical part is marked as bad Latin; why is it not diſtinguiſhed by the ſame mark in this place?

To abbreviate, or ſhorten, Abbreviare, contrahere, in compendium redigere.] The firſt of theſe Latin words muſt be acknowledged to be bad, and yet is neither here, nor in their claſſical part, marked as ſuch; and abbreviatus, which followeth in the next article, is not inſerted at all in their claſſical part, neither is abbreviatio; and abbreviatura is unqueſtionably bad, and yet all inſerted here as good Latin words.

To abbridge, or leſſen one's charges, Contrahere ſumptus.] It ſhould be minuere ſumptus; the former denoting rather to put one's ſelf to charges.

To abbridge, or keep one ſhort of his liberty, Coercere, in ordinem redigere.] Inſtead of the latter, which ſignifieth to reduce into rank or order, ſhould have been inſerted frænare, refrænare, cohibere, inhibere, reprimere, comprimere, or compeſcere.

An abce, or A, B, C, or croſs row, Alphabetum, tabula abcedaria] and

An A, B, C ſcholar, Abecedarius.] Are all words utterly unknown to the claſſic writers.

An abhorrer of marriage, Miſogamus. An abhorrer of women, Miſogynus.] Both Greek words, and neither of them thought worthy of a place in their Latin claſſical part. Whereas oſor mulierum is uſed by Plautus for the latter, and why may not oſor nuptiarum be judged proper to expreſs the former?

Ablepſy, or blindneſs, Cæcitas.] The Engliſh word, being derived from the Greek, and that Greek word uſed by Suetonius a Latin author, ablepſia ought not to have been entirely omitted either here, or in their Latin claſſical part.

To aboliſh, or utterly deſtroy, Abolere, diſperdere.] The laſt word diſperdere, according to their own account of the ſenſe of it in their claſſical part, is to looſe, conſume, throw, or ſquander away, not utterly to deſtroy. It ſhould have been abolere, perdere, extinguere.

An aboliſhment, Exauctoratio, &c.] This word is juſtly left out in their claſſical part; and, were it good, muſt ſignify, according to their own interpretation of exauctoro, a diſcharging or caſhiring.

Full of abomination, Abominoſus.] This word is marked in their claſſical part as bad; how then can it be good here? eſpecially when abominandus, which is undoubtedly claſſical, could not, one would think, but readily occur to the mind of this author.

To abſent another, or cauſe him to be abſent, Abſentare.] Here both Engliſh and Latin are equally faulty, there being no ſuch expreſſions, I think, in either language.

Abſterſive, of a cleanſing nature, Abſterſivus.] This word is ſo far from being claſſical, that it is utterly omitted in their Latin part. But abſtergendi vim habens, or abſtergendi vi præditus, is good Latin, and very well expreſſeth the meaning of the Engliſh word.

To abſtract, or abridge, Abſtrahere, &c.] Abſtrahere, in their claſſical part, is rightly interpreted to withdraw, pull away, &c. but hath no ſuch ſenſe given it there as contract or abridge, neither indeed is this ſenſe of it to be ſupported by the claſſic writers.

An abſtract, or ſhort draught of a thing, Compendium, abſtractum.] The laſt word is acknowledged by themſelves to be bad in their claſſical part, as it certainly is; moreover, breviarium, ſummarium, * epitome, the words uſed by claſſic writers to denote this ſenſe, are intirely omitted.

Abſurd ——— incongruus.] A word not uſed by the claſſic writers.

Abſurdity, Abſurditas.] This word is inſerted both in this place, and in the Latin claſſical part as of good authority, but was unknown to accurate writers in the Latin tongue, whoſe works are now extant.

Abundantly ——— affluenter.] This word, both here and in their claſſical part, is put as a good Latin word, probably, becauſe affluens and affluentia being undoubtedly ſuch, the compilers took for granted that affluenter muſt be ſo too.

Too much abundance, Superabundantia.] This word, in the compilers own opinion, is bad, being attributed in their claſſical part to Auguſtine; but might have been eaſily amended by nimia abundantia.

Abuſive ——— abuſivus.] This word is marked in the Cambridge edition as bad, but is not ſo marked in the editions of Littleton; and maledicus, a word uſed by the pureſt Roman writers, and well expreſſing the notion of the Engliſh word, is omitted in both.

By this ſhort review it appeareth how little credit is to be given ſometimes to title pages or prefaces; and I cannot forbear obſerving, that I was not a little ſurprized to find that not one of theſe errors is corrected in the edition of Dr. Littleton's dictionary lately publiſhed.

Were ſuch miſtakes as theſe to be met with only in the beginning of this or Littleton's dictionary, or were they much fewer in number than on an accurate examination they will be found to be, I ſhould willingly have imputed them to ſuch overſights, as are unavoidable in compiling ſo difficult a work; in which, not only an accurate knowledge of the Engliſh and Latin tongues is abſolutely neceſſary, but alſo a competent ſkill in many arts, profeſſions, and mechanical imployments, even tolerably to render into Latin the meaning of ſeveral terms peculiar to thoſe arts, the common expreſſions alluding to them, or to many cuſtoms peculiar to ourſelves. Or if bad Latin words were only ſubſtituted for ſuch Engliſh ones, the full ſenſe of which could not be expreſſed by ſingle claſſical words, they might be looked upon as almoſt neceſſary: but I have already given ſome inſtances, wherein many proper Latin words have been omitted in thoſe books, and ſuch as either have no authority from the pureſt Roman writers, or ſuch as are not well accommodated to denote the meaning of the Engliſh words, inſerted in their ſtead.

Amongst the number of thoſe which have no authority from the pureſt Roman authors, may be juſtly reckoned the following words, which may be found in both of thoſe dictionaries:

bubetii, for bullbaiters;
burſarius, a burſar of a college,
adſellare, to do one's buſineſs;
cabbala, a cabal;
cancellator, exauctorator, a canceller;
capapellis, a furred cap;
capa, the cape of a garment;
capitulari, to capitulate;
captivare, to captivate;
fervorium, a chaffern; which Dr. Littleton himſelf hath placed amongſt his Latin barbarous words;
henula, a little chapel;
deprædicare, to give a good character;
birretum, a ſhepherd's coat;
gallicidium, cock throwing;
hauſtellum, a collock; or pail with one handle;
confeſſionarius, a confeſſour, or father confeſſour;
ratifico, to confirm, or ratify;
ratificatio, a confirmation;
conformiter (not in their claſſic part) conformably;
congruitas, congruity, or fitneſs;
connaturalis (not in their claſſic part) connatural;
conſecutivus (not in their claſſic part) conſecutive.

And I am perſuaded there is hardly a page in which ſome inſtances of the like ſort are not to be found.

Not a few bad Latin words have been admitted in both on the ſcore of analogy only, without ever conſulting the Latin claſſical part, to ſee whether they might be ſupported by any claſſical author; ſuch as gibboſitas, bunchineſs; though gibbus and gibboſus are both good;

gravamen, a burden, or load;
effractor, a burglar;
inhumatio, a burying, where humatio, which is claſſical, is omitted in Littleton, and defoſſio, not claſſical, inſerted in both;
caſtrametatio, the pitching of a camp;
fuſtigatio, a caning;
impoſtor, a conie catcher or cheat;
ſubſaltatio, a croſs caper in dancing;
carnoſitas, carnoſity;
ſtrangulatorius, choaky;
circumſtantialis, circumſtantial;
circumſtantialiter, circumſtantially;
clarigatio, a clearing;
complacentia, complaiſance, or complacency;
exorcizo, to conjure as prieſts do;
unio, combinatio eccleſiarum, conſolidation of pariſhes;
congruitas, conſonance, or agreeingneſs;
conſubſtantialis, conſubſtantial;
obnato, to ſwim againſt;
tangibilis, tangible; where tactilis the claſſical word is omitted;
contemporaneus, contemporary, of the ſame time or ſtanding;
contemptibilis, deſpicabilis, aſpernabilis, contemptible;
contemptuoſus, contemptuous, or ſcornful;
aſpernanter, contemptuouſly;
contentatio, content, or contentedneſs;
contiguitas, contiguity, or nearneſs;
contingentia, contingency, or chance;
contingenter, contingently, or caſually.

As to the reaſons, on which I have proceeded in excepting againſt the ſeveral words and forms of expreſſion above mentioned, found in the aforeſaid Latin and Engliſh dictionaries, I muſt beg leave to refer the reader to an account of the ſeveral Roman writers, whoſe authority I have made uſe of in compiling this work, ſubjoined to this preface.

I shall now lay before the reader ſome inſtances collected from the ſaid dictionaries and Coles's, that concern the accommodating the Latin words and phraſes to the Engliſh ones, "which ought to expreſs, according to the rule laid "down above, as near as the nature of the two languages, and the different cuſtoms of both people, will admit, "the ſame ideas and conceptions of the things deſigned to be conveyed by them."

A ball to play with, Pila trigonaria.] The word trigonarius is not to be found in their Latin claſſical parts, nor, ſo far as I know, in any Roman author; and pila trigonalis is there rightly defined to be a three cornered ball, that they (the ancient Romans) exerciſed themſelves with at bathing. How doth this expreſs our idea of a ball to play with, agreeable to our cuſtoms?

A choak (or, as we now generally write it chuck) under the chin, Menti attrectatio.] But attrectatio in their claſſical parts is interpreted often handling, which is a very different action from what we mean by a chuck under the chin; I think, ictus levis ſub mentum cometh much nearer to our ſenſe of that expreſſion.

A compoſer at the preſs, Typotheta, opera typographica.] The words at the preſs ſhould have been omitted, it being the buſineſs of a compoſer, or compoſitor, to ſet up the types in their proper order, and not to work at preſs. Not to mention the needleſs repetition which may be obſerved a few lines after in the two firſt of the ſaid dictionaries.

To diſtill, act. Diſtillo. Diſtilled, Diſtillatus. A diſtiller, Diſtillator.] Diſtillo is rightly enough interpreted in their claſſical parts, to diſtill and drop down by little and little, and therefore may well be uſed for to diſtill or drop; but will by no means ſerve for the more uſual ſenſe of the Engliſh word, namely, to diſtill herbs, or flowers, which is, ſuccum herbarum vel florum ſubjecto igne elicere. And as for diſtillator and diſtillatus, I can find no good authority for either of them; the laſt is alſo omitted in their own Latin claſſical parts.

The fetlock joint in an horſe, Cruris & pedis coarticulatio.] But coarticulatio is omitted in their Latin claſſical parts, as not being uſed by any good Latin author; articulus crus & pedem conjungens, or cruris & pedis commiſſura articularis, may be juſtified from the pureſt writers. Fetlock is omitted in Littleton's dictionary, but inſerted in Coles's, and rendered cirri, ſubcirri. But none of thoſe authors have thought the laſt word worthy of a place in their Latin claſſical parts; and the firſt, according to their own interpretations, may as well ſignify the tuft, or creſt of feathers on a bird's head, as the locks on an horſe's feet.

An hog's cheek ſowſed, Sinciput ſuillum.] Muriâ conditum, or ſomething like it, ſhould have been added to expreſs this ſenſe.

A ſteed is rendered by Littleton, equus generoſus, by Coles, ſonipes, equus admiſſarius.] The firſt interpretation limiteth the ſenſe of it to a high mettled horſe, and the laſt to that of a ſtallion; whereas the Engliſh word denoting a horſe in general, without either of the ſaid reſtrictions, ſhould be rendered by equus only, or, as taken poetically, by ſonipes.

A ſteel to ſtrike fire with is in both the ſaid dictionaries rendered ignitabulum, and yet in their claſſical parts that word is interpreted to ſignify a fire pan, chafing diſh, or warming pan; and igniarium, rendered by them a fire ſteel, or ſteel to ſtrike fire with.

A ſtirrup in Littleton is rendered Stapes, ſubex pedaneus; by Coles, ſtapes, ſubex pedaneus, ſcandula, equitis pedaria mora.] The firſt word is not to be found in claſſic writers; ſubex is uſed by Gellius for a pilaſter to ſupport an image or ſtatue; ſcandula is interpreted in both dictionaries a ſlate, lath, or ſhingle; and mora ſignifieth a ſtay indeed, but in the ſenſe of ſtopping or delaying, not of ſtaying or propping up. I have therefore rendered it by ſcabellum vel ſcamillum equeſtre pendulum.

A ſtitch, Sutura, Litt. A ſtitch in ſewing, Punctura, Coles.] Sutura is rather what we call ſewing, or a ſeam, than a ſingle ſtitch; for which reaſon, beſides ſutura, I have further explained it by ſutura uno fili ductu facta; but punctura ſignifieth a pricking in general, whether made by a pin, bodkin, ſword, &c.

A terrace, or terraſs, Aggeſtus, agger, Litt. Agger, via aggeſta, Coles.] I think neither of them ſufficiently expreſs what we uſually mean by this term, and therefore have put it thus; A terraſſe, or terraſſe walk, Terrenus agger quo deambulare ſolemus.

A tutor, Tutor, præceptor, pædagogus, Litt.] Tutor in Latin ſignifieth a patron, or guardian, but with us a domeſtic teacher, wherefore tutor cannot be properly applied to our notion of that word; I have therefore rendered it præceptor domeſticus vel privatus. And for the ſenſe of pædagogus ſee my Latin claſſical part.

An upholſter, Tapetiarius, culcitrarius, Litt. Tapetiarius, plumarius, Coles.] All theſe Latin words are deſtitute of claſſic authority, except plumarius, which denoteth one that dealeth in feathers, and not one who dealeth in beds and other houſehold furniture, according to the uſual ſenſe put upon that word; wherefore I have ſubſtituted Lectorum & alius ſupellectilis fabricator.

To waddle as a duck, Provolvor, Litt. Motitare, provolvi, Coles.] Provolvor ſignifieth to be rolled or tumbled, and motito is a word of ſuch a mean claſs, that Littleton hath omitted it in both his Engliſh and claſſical part; Coles hath it in both parts, and in the latter interpreteth it to move often. I have tranſlated it inceſſu vacillare.

WHAT courſe hath been taken in the following work, to avoid ſuch miſtakes as thoſe before enumerated, either with regard to the inſertion of Latin words deſtitute of claſſical authority, or of ſuch as are not well adapted to expreſs the ſenſe denoted by the Engliſh, is the next thing that falleth under conſideration.

MY firſt care was, that none but claſſical words ſhould be admitted into this firſt part thereof, if ſuch could be found; and where thoſe were wanting, I choſe rather to make uſe of a periphraſis in the firſt place, and afterwards added the Greek or bad Latin words, which yet are carefully diſtinguiſhed throughout this work from the claſſical ones, the former by *, and the latter by ‖. So that the conſultors of this part may know, on the firſt ſight, to what claſs each word belongeth.

THE bad influence miſtakes in books made uſe of in one's younger years may have on riper age, is too well known to require many examples for the proof of it; but I cannot forbear mentioning a few remarks I have made, which may ſerve to confirm the truth of this obſervation, and to ſhew how careful thoſe perſons who have the care of conducting youth in their ſtudies ought to be, in preventing, as much as poſſible, the putting into their hands thoſe books, by which their tender years may be much prejudiced by falſe impreſſions. A conſiderable author, well known to the learned for his excellent notes and verſion of Lucretius, had been ſo accuſtomed from his youth to the putting e contra for on the contrary, that even in his Latin interpretation of that elegant author he cannot forbear the uſe of it to explain that writer's contra by. And ſome late writers have frequently made uſe of verſio, without the leaſt ſcruple, for verſion or tranſlation, as it is found in Littleton's dictionary; whereas Stevens, Tachart, and other compilers of Latin dictionaries of good note, have intirely omitted that word, as not being claſſical in any ſenſe of it. Some editions of Plin. Hiſt. VIII, 33. ſpeaking of the chameleon, have it indeed; Nec pupillæ motu, ſed totius oculi verſione circumſpicit; but Harduin readeth verſatione, and ſaith almoſt all the manuſcripts have it ſo, and I can find it in no other claſſic. Hence it is plain, that there is very little or no authority for verſio at all; but if the vulgar be admitted to be a true reading of that place in Pliny, yet it is there uſed in the ſenſe of turning or moving, and not of tranſlating or interpreting into another language. In verbis, conceptibuſque caſtus, ſaith the anonymous author of a Greek book lately publiſhed; agreeably to the ſame dictionary, which interpreteth conceptus to ſignify a conceit or notion, and giveth not the leaſt notice that it is only uſed in that ſenſe by later writers. One can hardly think that any writer ſo careful in his diction as this and ſome other late authors ſeem to be, ſhould uſe e contra, elumbem, modernus, minutias diſcutere, and ſeveral more ſuch words and expreſſions, which are not to be ſupported by the claſſic writers, unleſs they had either ſo long been accuſtomed to the uſe of them, as not to have the leaſt ſcruple as to their authority in the claſſics, or truſted too much to the dictionary they commonly made uſe of.

AND how far ſoever the next following liſt of words may ſeem to come ſhort of the purity of the Latin tongue, the younger ſcholar may be juſtified in the uſe of them, if the dictionaries I am ſpeaking of be allowed to be proper ſtandards in this caſe:

Deauratus inſtead of inauratus, for gilded;
diviſibilis inſtead of dividuus, for diviſible;
effectivus inſtead of efficax, for effective;
encomium inſtead of laudatio, for an encomium;
hiſtoriographus inſtead of hiſtoricus, for an hiſtorian;
immediate inſtead of proxime, or nulla re intercedente, for immediately;
inſenſibilis, inſtead of inſenſilis, for inſenſible;
irrationalis inſtead of rationis expers, for irrational;
malefactor inſtead of maleficus, for a malefactor;

prodi-

prodigalitas inſtead of effuſio or prodigentia, for prodigality;
puſillanimitas inſtead of timiditas, for puſillanimity;
ſenſibilis inſtead of ſenſilis, for ſenſible;
ſomnolentus inſtead of ſomniculoſus, for ſleepy;
ſubditus inſtead of civis, or regi vel principi ſubditus, for a ſubject;
ſubintelligo inſtead of intelligo, for to underſtand;
tangibilis inſtead of tactilis, for tangible;
tempeſtuoſus inſtead of procelloſus, for tempeſtuous;
tranſactio inſtead of res geſtæ, for a tranſaction;
unigenitus inſtead of unigena, or unicus filius, for only begotten;
unio inſtead of concordia, for union;
uſurpatio inſtead of iniqua occupatio, or injuſta uſurpatio, for uſurpation.

In order to avoid ſuch miſtakes as theſe, it was neceſſary, in the compiling this part of the work, to have frequent recourſe to the claſſical part; it being difficult readily to call to mind, whether ſeveral words, which there may be occaſion to uſe, be really claſſical, or not. I need not relate the labour and fatigue attending this compariſon, ſince every perſon verſed in grammatical learning muſt be partly ſenſible of the greatneſs of it; which probably alſo is the reaſon why all our dictionaries are ſo very defective in this point, that one would imagine the two parts in any one of them not to have been compiled by the ſame author; but this I do aſſure the public, that there are very few Latin words or phraſes throughout this part (allowance being made for ſuch overſights as may be reaſonably ſuppoſed to eſcape a diligent and cloſe application) which gave me occaſion to doubt either of their authority in the claſſic writers, or the particular ſenſe they are by them uſed in, but what have been carefully compared with the claſſical part, which, for that reaſon, was firſt deſignedly ſettled, and printed off.

This method of comparing the two parts was the more needful, becauſe, as I have already ſaid, it ſeemeth to have been entirely neglected in all the Latin and Engliſh dictionaries I have yet met with; and this neglect I take to have been one great occaſion of their numerous miſtakes. In Latin, as well as Engliſh and other languages, the Subſtantive, Adjective, Adverb, and ſome other parts of the ſame word regularly differ only in the termination or laſt ſyllable, which is formed according to the uſage peculiar to each language; as in Engliſh, grateful, gratefully, gratefulneſs; in Latin, gratus, grate, gratia. In the language laſt mentioned theſe are called conjugata, and one or more of them are frequently deſtitute of claſſical authority, though the reſt are in common uſe; hence ariſeth ſome difficulty to learners, and many have been led as it were inſenſibly into miſtakes by the careleſneſs of the compilers of Latin dictionaries with regard to this matter. Affluenter, as I obſerved before, is inadvertently inſerted in Littleton for abundantly, which is not to be found in any claſſical writer, though the other conjugates, affluo, affluens, and affluentia are of undoubted authority; agilis and agilitas are claſſical, but agiliter is not; animoſe and animoſus are good, but animoſitas, though admitted in Littleton's claſſical part as ſuch, is juſtly, whether deſignedly or not, omitted in his Engliſh part under animoſity; congeſtus is claſſical, but its conjugates, congeſte, congeſtim, congeſtio, have been introduced into the Latin tongue ſince the corruption of its purity by careleſs or ignorant writers; and ſo of many more. The ſettling all the words of this ſort occurring in this part required both much time and labour in frequently turning to the claſſical part, and yet without this method many miſtakes in this point, handed down from one to another by the writers of our Latin dictionaries, muſt have remained ſtill uncorrected.

The mentioning theſe conjugates bringeth to my mind another caſe not much unlike them, which hath occaſioned me ſome expenſe of labour and care, though very little regarded by thoſe who have preceded me in this path; namely, the endeavouring to carry not only the ſame explications through all the conjugates of the ſame Engliſh word, but the ranging the Latin words in the ſame order under each of them, ſo far as is conſiſtent with our common uſage of thoſe words, and the method in this work generally obſerved, of placing the ſeveral words of each declenſion and conjugation together. By this arrangement the idea is continued, the differences with regard to the formation of the words in each language are more obvious, and the import and force of each is rendered more perſpicuous. Examples of theſe explications, and this arrangement of the Latin words, may be ſeen under ſenſible, ſenſibleneſs, and ſenſibly;

ſtrict, ſtrictly, ſtrictneſs;
ſullen, ſullenly, ſullenneſs;
tedious, tediouſly, tediouſneſs;
thoughtful, thoughtfully, thoughtfulneſs;
thoughtleſs, thoughtleſly, thoughtleſneſs.

The difficulty of accommodating ſuch Latin words as may well expreſs the meaning of the Engliſh, is in ſome words very great, which ſeemeth to have deterred former writers on this ſubject even from attempting to render many of them into Latin. Yet conſidering that ſome aſſiſtance in ſuch caſes muſt be more eligible to learners, than to be left intirely deſtitute of any, I have endeavoured to render into Latin all ſuch words and expreſſions, however difficult, as I found to be of common uſe amongſt us. If, in ſome of theſe, I have not ſo clearly or ſuccinctly expreſſed the full ſenſe of the Engliſh, as could be wiſhed; yet I flatter myſelf the conſultors will at leaſt find ſo much aſſiſtance in theſe difficult caſes, as to be the better enabled to accommodate them to their own liking. The word ſet, denoting a compleat ſuit of any thing, is applied to a great number of things, as, a ſet of China, a ſet of furniture, a ſet of diamonds, &c. And yet, as common as this ſenſe of that word is, I find not the leaſt hint of it in any of our Latin dictionaries; nor of ſome other ſenſes of it, which the reader may find inſerted in this work. To enumerate all the expreſſions to which the word ſet is even applied in this ſenſe, would have been not only difficult, but tedious too; ſo many however are inſerted herein, as I think may be ſufficient to inſtruct the learner how to render into Latin all others of that claſs. The ſame method is obſerved in other caſes of the like nature. The words veſtis, veſtimentum, &c. are too general to expreſs what we mean by a ſuit, or compleat ſuit of clothes; wherefore I have added, as a farther explication, veſtium ſimul indutorum omnis apparatus vel ſyntheſis. The word ſtuff hath very many ſignifications, but I have contented myſelf with enumerating the moſt common, and giving ſuch hints as I hope may be ſerviceable in rendering any of the reſt properly into Latin.

As the beſt writers in the Latin tongue have always been very cautious of admitting Greek words, excepting in terms of art, where there is a ſort of neceſſity for uſing them; ſo I have inſerted the Latin words always firſt, and afterwards annexed the Greek, but with this mark *.

The number of Latin words paralleled with the Engliſh in the dictionary I now offer to the public, is much greater than uſual in this ſort of books; and there are ſcarce any Engliſh Verbs which admit of different ſignifications, but ſeveral Latin phraſes, beſides their parallels in ſingle words, are annexed, which are not to be found in others; moſt of theſe being put in the infinitive mood, and followed by the caſes proper to ſuch expreſſions, young learners will be more eaſily inſtructed as to their grammatical conſtruction, than they can be by words at length. The more inquiſitive perſons may ſatisfy their curioſity as to what hath been done in this point, by comparing the following words with any performance of this nature yet publiſhed in our tongue:

It cannot, I think, be reaſonably expected, that every Latin phraſe inſerted herein, ſhould in all reſpects exactly anſwer the uſe the Romans made of them, ſince their cuſtoms in many caſes were very different from ours; and to be over ſcrupulous in this caſe might deprive us of many ſingle words, as well as phraſes, witneſs the terms for the different parts of their habits, exerciſes, &c. I hope it will be thought ſufficient, if their phraſes are as nearly accommodated to our form of expreſſion, as the difference in the cuſtoms of the two people will admit of, For example, though incidere linum doth not agree with our cuſtom in breaking open letters, it not being uſual with us to faſten our letters with a thread, as the Romans did, and as even now the Italians generally do; yet it denoteth the ſame thing that we mean by breaking open a letter. And among the Roman writers we meet with ceras implere, for to write a long letter; ultima cera, for the laſt part of it; cretâ obſignare, to ſeal it; inducere, to make a raſure, or blot out ſomething; all which allude to Roman cuſtoms very different from ours. As likewiſe the ſingle words ſupra and infra in Latin books no otherwiſe ſignify before and after, than as they allude to the Roman way of writing on rolls, whence alſo books were called volumina.

Moreover, that nothing might be wanting which I thought could any way contribute to the eaſe and advantage of learners, many cautions, definitions, hints, and rules are added by way of note throughout this part. Many Engliſh words, though derived immediately from the Latin, yet vary much in their moſt uſual ſenſe from the ſignification thereof in the Latin tongue. Prevent is now very ſeldom uſed in the ſenſe of the Latin, to go before, in order to remove any impediment or danger; though this ſenſe of it was not uncommon in our tongue at the time when the Engliſh Liturgy was compiled, as appeareth by the frequent uſe of it in this ſenſe. Subſcription properly ſignifieth only a writing one's name under, or at the bottom of an inſtrument, in token of conſent thereto; but now to do a thing by ſubſcription hath a different meaning. Uſurpation, in Engliſh, always denoteth an unjuſt occupation of what belongeth to another, but in Latin ſignifieth generally only a uſing, without any reproachful imputation. I thought it therefore adviſeable to give notice of ſuch things as theſe by way of note, to prevent learners from being deceived by this different uſe of ſome words in the two languages. Examples of theſe may be ſeen under

at,
become,
by,
contrary,
deal,
give,
graſs hopper,
hen,
in,
let,
man,
merchant,
mouſe,
muſt,
ſaunter,
ſtuff,
ſumpter horſe,
ſycamore tree,
that,
tierce,
uſurp,
yet;

and in many other places, too tedious to be enumerated.

The declenſions of Nouns, and conjugations of Verbs are denoted by the figures 1, 2, 3, &c. unleſs in ſuch of them as vary from the general rules proper to each, in regard either to the gender of the Noun, or preterperfect tenſe of the Verb; in theſe latter both the genitive caſes and genders of the Nouns are given, as well as the preterperfect tenſes of the Verbs; ſo that the younger ſcholars will have no occaſion, in tranſlating Engliſh into Latin, to conſult the claſſical part to know the gender, method of declining, or forming the ſingle parts of ſpeech, or to learn from thence the grammatical conſtruction.

To conclude this head, I have ſpared no pains to make this part as uſeful as poſſible, not only for the more immediate ſervice of Latin ſchools, but alſo of thoſe gentlemen who may have occaſion to correſpond with foreigners in the Latin tongue. For ſome perſons, who have been pretty converſant with that language, and are able to read a claſſic author with eaſe, without frequently conſulting a Latin dictionary, yet may ſtand in need of ſuch aſſiſtance, when they have occaſion to tranſlate Engliſh into Latin; in which caſe the really valuable Latin dictionaries of Doletus, Stephens, Faber, Tachart, or others, will ſtand them in little ſtead. The more common law Latin terms are alſo continued throughout this part, under their proper heads, which are principally deſigned for the uſe of thoſe who follow that profeſſion, but ſome knowledge of them may be alſo ſerviceable to other perſons; theſe are always ſeparated from the claſſical words by this mark ‖.

THE Appendages to this part are:

1. The Index geographicus, containing the Engliſh and Latin names of kingdoms, countries, diſtricts, rivers, cities, towns, and the more remarkable villages of the univerſe, in a conciſe, and yet more exact method, than is uſually to be met with in books of this ſort.

2. The more uſual Chriſtian names of men and women; and a ſhort ſketch of the manner of tranſlating Engliſh ſurnames into Latin, as uſed in our ancient records.

I now proceed to lay before the public the alterations and improvements made in

II. THE Latin claſſical part; which being deſigned partly for the interpretation of the claſſical writers, and partly as a ſtandard for the Latin tongue, ought to contain "all the words found in any good editions of the ſeveral Latin authors " generally allowed to be claſſical, with proper marks and notes accurately diſtinguiſhing thoſe which rarely occur, or are " only read in authors of an inferior claſs, or in the poets, from thoſe which are undoubtedly claſſical, and uſed by good "writers in proſe; together with their etymologies, ſo far as they can be fixed with any certainty or good probability; and an exact and clear interpretation of all their different ſenſes ranged in their due order, beginning with thoſe neareſt to their originals; as alſo the proper vouchers or authorities for every ſenſe ſo given."

As the juſtneſs and propriety of any word or expreſſion in the modern languages is commonly determined by its uſage amongſt thoſe, who are reputed the moſt polite ſpeakers or writers in them; ſo in the Latin tongue this juſtneſs and propriety can be ſettled only by pertinent examples produced out of the claſſic authors, whoſe works are preſerved to our times. For this having been for many ages a dead language, no other method now remaineth for acquiring an accurate knowledge thereof, than a diligent ſearch into, and exact imitation of, their excellent writings. Where-ever the Latin grammars or dictionaries deviate from theſe, their authority will have but very little weight with perſons capable of forming a true judgement in theſe matters.

The plan on which all our Latin dictionaries are compiled, even ſuppoſing that plan to be well executed, appeareth to me to be inconſiſtent with the accuracy required to fix either the ſignifications or authorities in ſuch a manner, as may be ſafely depended upon.

For in their Engliſh interpretations of the Latin words, the writers have generally retained the ſenſes given by their predeceſſors, much in the ſame order as they found them, without a due regard to the method which ought to be carefully obſerved in this caſe, namely, to range the ſeveral ſenſes given according to their nearneſs to, or remoteneſs from the original meaning of the Latin word; and ſeem to have been induſtrious only in adding ſome new ſenſes they occaſionally met with in reading claſſic authors, which could not be inſerted in their proper places, without new modelling the whole; and this required too great an expenſe of labour and time for them to attempt; and yet without it all additions or improvements tended rather to make their dictionaries worſe, as being ſtill more diſorderly and confuſed.

And as to the authority, or goodneſs and badneſs of the Latin words, ſome of theſe writers have omitted all vouchers, who might atteſt the truth of the interpretations by them given; others have cited one author only, even for thoſe Latin words, to which they themſelves have affixed many different ſignifications; which muſt leave perſons, ſtudious of accuracy, at a very great uncertainty, whether the author ſo cited hath uſed the word in the particular ſenſe they have occaſion for.

Besides, the citation of AUTHORITIES can be of very little ſervice, unleſs it is done with ſuch exactneſs, as always to name ſome good author to every word, as well as to every particular ſignification of that word, which is repreſented as claſſical; and in thoſe of an inferior rank, to cite truly the beſt author who maketh uſe of them. For if a certain and fixed method be not carefully obſerved in this point, how is it poſſible for any perſon, entruſted with the direction of a learner's ſtudies for attaining the knowledge of the purity and elegancy of the Latin tongue, to give any proper rules, by the obſervation of which his ſcholar may be ſure not to be led into errors?

Suppoſe it ſhould be given as a direction to a young ſcholar, that whatever words he ſhall find in his dictionary as cited from Cicero, Cæſar, Terence, or Livy, are unqueſtionably good; he may reaſonably conclude, that the words in which neither one of theſe, nor indeed any other claſſic author is referred to, muſt be ſuch as cannot be ſupported by the authority of the Roman writers, and conſequently are ſuch as he ought not to admit in any of his compoſitions; and yet are unqueſtionably of good authority, but no author is cited for any of them either in the Cambridge dictionary, or any edition of Littleton, ſo far as I can find upon a careful examination, which yet in ſuch caſes are generally the only books the learner hath to rely upon; for Coles hath omitted almoſt all citations of this nature. Though it muſt be owned, in juſtice to the editors of the Cambridge dictionary, that they have cited authorities for many other words, which are left entirely deſtitute of them in all the editions of Littleton: but of theſe I have taken no notice, as not coming under my deſign of obſerving here only ſuch deficiencies, as are common to both thoſe dictionaries.

Theſe all occur under the letter A, in thoſe two dictionaries conſidered jointly, and if they were examined ſeparately, the number would be very conſiderably increaſed; what then is to be expected in all the other letters?

Poetry, ſay the Cambridge editors very juſtly, is known to have a ſet of words peculiar to her court, which we have diſtinguiſhed by a flower [✢] placed before them. We judged ſuch a diſtinction very beneficial to youth, who are apt to uſe one inſtead of the other, &c. I cannot but agree with theſe learned gentlemen in this obſervation, and have endeavoured to attend to it throughout this work, though I find it hath been neglected in moſt of the editions of Dr. Littleton's dictionary, and particularly in that lately publiſhed. The reader may ſatisfy his curioſity in this reſpect, by turning to the words ærifer, æripes, aëripes, æriſonus, æſtifer, æthra, alifer, aliger, alipes, altiſonus, altitonans, altivolans, &c. to each of which in this dictionary is prefixed a ✢.

It ought indeed to be obſerved, by way of excuſe for Dr. Littleton, that he could not be furniſhed with ſeveral editions of the claſſics, which would have been very ſerviceable to him in compiling his dictionary, had they been extant in his time. Particularly, the editions printed for the uſe of the Dauphin, now ſo commonly uſed in our Latin ſchools, were then unknown amongſt us. Salluſt and Florus, which were publiſhed firſt, were printed at Paris in MDCLXXIV, and the imprimatur to Littleton's dictionary is dated 1 Jan. MDCLXXVII; whence we may fairly conclude, that even theſe two did not come to the doctor's hand time enough for him to make any conſiderable uſe of them in his dictionary. And Cæſar, Livy, Tacitus, Suetonius, Ovid, Horace, Statius, with ſome others, were not printed till ſeveral years after the publication of his book. The excellent edition of Pliny's Natural Hiſtory (that ſtorehouſe of the Roman tongue, as the editors of the Cambridge dictionary call it) publiſhed by Harduin, was firſt printed in MDCLXXXV. To ſay nothing of Gronovius's celebrated edition of Cicero's works in MDCXCII, or of the ſeveral valuable editions of the other claſſics publiſhed ſince Littleton's time by Grævius, Burmannus, Henninius, Broukhuſius, and divers other learned men abroad; or by biſhop Leng, Dr. Bentley, Talbot, Davis, and others among ourſelves.

But it is ſomewhat ſurpriſing, that the editors of the Cambridge dictionary (to ſay nothing of the later editions of Littleton) who were undoubtedly perſons equal to the taſk, as appeareth by their valuable improvements in ſeveral parts of their work, eſpecially under the letters above mentioned, and who affirm iu their preface, that they had free and conſtant recourſe to the Dauphin editions, and that their compleat indices were of great uſe to them, ſhould yet have taken no notice of the following miſtakes, which might eaſily have been rectified by the aſſiſtance afforded in thoſe editions.

Abedo in both dictionaries is attributed to Tacitus, and the words of Tacitus are cited in the Cambridge edition thus: Exorta vis locuſtarum abederat quicquid herbidum aut frondoſum. The words are in Annal. xv, 5, 4, where Berneggerus, Ryckius, and all the editions I have conſulted, read ambederat.

Adblandior is attributed to Horace, but upon a ſtrict ſearch I can find no ſuch word in any part of that author; the words Ceſſit immanis tibi blandienti, Carm. iii, 11, 15, ſeem to come the neareſt to it.

Adcognoſco is falſely attributed to Quintilian; but it is found in ſome bad editions of Seneca de Beneficiis, ii, 13, where for Oſtendiſque te non agnoſcere iſta bona, quibus tantum inflaris, as it is now read in the Variorum edition, was read in ſome former editions adcognoſcere, and in others again adagnoſcere.

Adduplico is fathered upon Plautus, which I take to have been occaſioned by a depraved reading of the paſſage in his Pœn. iii, 1, 61. Adduplicabit omne furtum, where the Variorum edition hath id duplicabit omne furtum.

Advocamentum is attributed to Pliny, but upon inquiry I cannot find that any tolerable Latin author hath uſed this word; I take the miſtake to have been occaſioned by a corrupt reading of advocamenta for avocamenta in Plin. Epiſt. viii, 5. Ero ergo ſuſpenſus pro homine amiciſſimo, dum admittere avocamenta, & cicatricem pati poſſit; quam nihil æque ac neceſſitas ipſa, & dies longa, & ſatietas doloris indicit.

Abortus a, um, is attributed to Statius, and indeed ſome old editions read aborta ſidera, Theb. viii, 32; but the Variorum and others now read oborta for aborta.

Abſconſio is cited from Pliny, and even the induſtrious Faber ſaith of it, Affertur ex Plin. 8, 16, in lexicis; verum libri habent abſcondente. But, upon a careful examination, I cannot find either abſconſio, or abſcondente, in the place referred to, or in any other place of either of the Plinies. The words of Pliny the hiſtorian, who ix, 17 in the common editions, but ix, 26 of Harduin's, hath the following ſentence, Mugilum natura ridetur, in metu capite abſcondito, totos ſe occultari credentium, ſeem to come the neareſt.

Abſento is attributed to Claudian, who, de Raptu Proſ. iii, 214, hath, according to ſome editions, Colloquio patriiſque procul abſentaverit aſtris, though inconſiſtent with the meaſure of the verſe; but the more correct ones, and particularly that publiſhed by W. Pyrrho for the uſe of the Dauphin, read mandaverit.

Annuatim is attributed to Pliny, but on a ſtrict ſearch it will be found to be an old miſtake handed down from one dictionary-writer to another. For in an edition of Laurentius Valla's Elegantiæ, printed at Baſil in MDLXXI, lib. vi, c. 60, againſt Valla's words: Quidam adverbium hinc ducunt (ſpeaking of the word quotannis) quod eſt annuatim, ut Plinius libro duodecimo dicens: Herodoto teſte, qui tradit, ſingula millia talentûm annuatim thuris penſitaſſe Arabes regibus Perſarum, ſi codex verus eſt, is this note: Annua habet Frobenianus Plinii codex ab Eraſmo recognitus. Harduin alſo readeth annuo in that place. The words cited are in his edition xii, 40, of the common editions xii, 17.

Auriginoſus is by miſtake attributed to Horace. But I can find no other authority for it than that of an old Gloſſary, which explaineth ἰκτερικὸς by it.

But to ſay no more on this head, nor of many Greek words inſerted in this part, ſuch as abrodiætus, acanthion, acentra, acrocolia, adecaſtus, adiaphoria, ænigmatiſtes, which not being read in any claſſic author, ought not to have been admitted in a Latin claſſical dictionary; I beg leave only to obſerve, that Littleton hath both inſerted the word adeſpotus in its alphabetical order in his dictionary, and uſed it in his Latin preface, even in a ſentence, in which he accuſeth Cooper of the ſame fault whereof he himſelf is ſo guilty.

AS to the number of Latin words, though I have rejected ſome which are in thoſe dictionaries, as having none of the claſſic writers to atteſt their authority, yet I have inſerted very many claſſical words omitted in them, a ſpecimen of which

I have already given under the letter A, and the reader, on comparing this dictionary with theirs, will find the number in the reſt of the letters to be very conſiderable.

THE next thing falling under conſideration is the marks and notes, which may ſerve accurately to diſtinguiſh thoſe words that rarely occur, or are only read in authors of an inferior claſs, from thoſe which are undoubtedly claſſical. I have already taken notice of ſeveral miſtakes committed by others with regard to this point, though requiring the greateſt accuracy; many words of the firſt rank among the claſſics having no author's name annexed to them, ſeveral claſſical words being omitted, and a great number of words, which do not appear in the claſſic writers inſerted without proper marks, by which they may be diſtinguiſhed from thoſe which are undoubtedly claſſical.

BUT there is another great fault not uncommon in the writers before mentioned, which is the attributing ſeveral bad words to good authors, and good words to bad ones; this muſt neceſſarily miſlead thoſe who unwarily depend upon their citations. It may be convenient to produce ſome inſtances of both kinds, before I proceed to the account of the method I have taken for ſettling this affair in a better manner.

Humiliatus is attributed to Cicero in both thoſe dictionaries, but they ſeem to have been lead into that error by Calepine's wrong citation of Cicero's words, Nat. Deor. ii, 47. Animalia humiliata, ut cibum terreſtrem facile roſtris contingant; whereas all the valuable editions of that author read humilitas inſtead of humiliata, except Aldus's, which hath humilia.

Jactuoſe is fathered upon Cicero, but I cannot find that word in any part of Cicero's writings, or in any tolerable Latin author.

Jaculo is attributed to Claudian, but the index to the Dauphin's edition of that author exhibiteth no ſuch word, neither can I find it uſed by any claſſical Latin author.

Jejunatio is cited as uſed by Celſus, but is, ſo far as I can find, uſed only by authors of a much inferior claſs, ſuch as Tertullian, or other writers ſince him.

Jentator is attributed to Eutropius, but I find it not in him, or any other Roman author.

Ignavitas is cited from Juſtin, but with what juſtneſs may be ſeen in my account of that word.

Illaqueatio is attributed to Livy, and illaqueator to Tacitus, but neither of them can be ſupported by the authors cited for them, or indeed any other of the claſſics; though illaqueatus is undoubtedly claſſical.

Illatratio is attributed to Tacitus, but after much ſearch I can neither find it in his works now extant, nor indeed in any other claſſic author.

Regeneror is attributed to Auguſtin, an author of no weight in this caſe; but that word in the claſſical ſenſe is uſed even by Pliny the hiſtorian, as may be ſeen in my account of it.

Regor is referred to Boethius, who lived in the fifth century, when the purity of the Latin tongue was much depraved, and yet that word is common in Cicero, and others of the firſt claſs of Roman writers.

Regyro is marked as bad or obſolete, though read in Florus, as well as Varro R. R. i, 57.

Remote, and Remotius its comparative, are omitted in both thoſe dictionaries, though the comparative is read even in Cicero.

Scamillum is cited as if only to be found in Priſcian or Apuleius, authors much inferior to Vitruvius, in whoſe works the conſultor of this dictionary may eaſily find it by the directions given under that word.

Scaphus alſo is uſed by the ſame author, though in thoſe dictionaries it is marked as a bad word, and referred to Cæl. Rhodiginus.

Separate, a word of no authority, is attributed to Cicero.

Serro is cited in both as read in Silius Italicus, but his words are Qualiſque comantes auro ſervavit ramos Junonius anguis, lib. vi, 184, as read in Cellarius's, Drakenborch's, and all other editions, which I have conſulted. They might perhaps be lead into this miſtake by Stephens's Latin Theſaurus, who read ſerravit in this place; and yet, what is worthy of notice, this miſtake is continued in the late edition of Stephens.

Sonax, which is uſed in ſo common a book as Ovid's Metamorphoſes, hath only the name of Apuleius annexed to it in the ſaid dictionaries.

Adnavigo is marked as obſolete in the laſt edition of Littleton (but not in the former editions, nor in that of Cambridge) though uſed by Pliny H. xxxv, 10, and adnavigatus is read in the ſame author, xxxvi, 12.

THAT the younger ſcholars have need of ſome more certain directions, as to the authorities of Latin words, than are afforded them in the dictionaries now generally uſed, muſt, I think, by this time be evident to every impartial and competent judge in this affair. It is therefore proper to inform the public what meaſures I have taken in this work for reducing this matter to a greater certainty, for the guidance of learners, in a caſe which is of no ſmall importance in ſpeaking or writing Latin with tolerable exactneſs. To effect this, I have conſidered the whole Latin tongue as reducible to the following claſſes.

THE firſt is of ſuch words or phraſes as are not only found in the pureſt Roman authors, but alſo became of common uſe. As to theſe, the conſultor is generally referred to ſome author who uſeth them, by the citation of the particular book, chapter, or verſe, without any other mark.

THE ſecond is of ſuch as are found but ſeldom in any good author, and, though uſed by ſome writer of the firſt rank, did not afterwards ſo far prevail as to be commonly made uſe of by the authors who ſucceeded him; of theſe I have given the conſultors notice, as may be ſeen in abludo, abnato, abnocto, adareo, addecet, addenſeo, addenſo, addivino, addubitatus, adedo, adhæſio, adhæſus, adhalo, adhamo, adhorreſco, adimpleo, admaturor, admordeo, adnutrio, adverbero, adverſator, and many others, by ſubjoining Raro occ. or occurrit, vix alibi, or neſcio an alibi. This I have done through the whole work, by way of admonition, that words of the ſame ſignification, and more frequent uſe, ought to be preferred to the words of this claſs.

THE third is of thoſe which were looked upon as obſolete when the Latin tongue arrived to its moſt flouriſhing ſtate, about the reigns of the two firſt Cæſars; ſuch as abemo, abjugo, abjuraſſo, ablectus, abluvium, abmitto, abneco, abnueo, abnuto, aborior, abſumedo, accepſo, aceo, aditio, adjurgium, adjurgo, adnicto, adobruo, æſti, æthiopus, &c. Theſe are marked with an obeliſk †.

THE fourth is of thoſe which are met with chiefly in the Latin poets, as, abeneus, abenus, aliſer, aliger, altiſonus, altitonans, &c. Theſe are denoted by a flower de luce ⚜.

THE fifth is of ſuch Greek words as occur in ſome claſſic writer, eſpecially thoſe written or printed in the Roman character; to theſe I have generally annexed ſuch Latin words for them, as are either of the ſame import, or ſuch as come the neareſt to it, where-ever my utmoſt care and diligence could diſcover them. For the difficulty of doing this exactly is evident from the reaſon why ſuch Greek words were uſed by the pureſt Latin authors, namely, becauſe there was no Latin word, at leaſt occurring to them, which ſufficiently expreſſed the idea they deſigned to convey by them. Examples may be ſeen in acroama, agon, agoniſta, agyrta, &c. Theſe are denoted by a ſtar *.

THE ſixth is of thoſe words or phraſes which are met with only in authors of an inferior rank, who wrote in the decline of the Latin tongue; to moſt of which I have ſubjoined better Latin words marked with an obeliſk turned thus ⸸, as may be ſeen in ablator, abliguritor, abominatio, abominoſus, acceptabilis, acceptilatio, &c. Theſe are denoted by two parallel lines placed perpendicularly, thus ‖.

THE laſt is of ſuch as have been either formed by later writers in analogy to the claſſical words, or introduced into the Latin tongue from divers other languages by hiſtorians, lawyers, or eccleſiaſtic authors. Too many of theſe have been inſerted in our Latin dictionaries, to the no ſmall prejudice of the purity of the Latin tongue. The better ſort of them I have retained, becauſe they may be of ſervice to ſtudents in thoſe profeſſions, eſpecially that of the civil law; but have utterly rejected many others, as quite foreign to the deſign of a claſſical Latin dictionary. Thoſe perſons who may be deſirous of better acquaintance with them, may be ſupplied from books purpoſely deſigned to explain them, as Du Freſne's Latin Gloſſary, &c. Theſe are alſo marked with ‖.

IN giving the ETYMOLOGIES of the Latin words I have for the moſt part confined myſelf to one or two, which ſeemed to me the moſt probable; perſons who are more curious in this matter may conſult Voſſius, Beckman, and others, who have written largely on this ſubject. The Hebrew and Greek words, except where the Latin is derived from them, are omitted, as ſerving rather for a vain oſtentation of learning, than affording any real benefit in a work of this nature.

THE ſeveral SIGNIFICATIONS of ſuch words as admit of various ſenſes are ranged in a method entirely new, with regard to our Latin dictionaries; as will be obvious on the firſt inſpection; being all numbered by figures, 1, 2, 3, &c. and ranged together in their natural order, beginning with that ſignification which cometh neareſt to the etymology of the word, where that is known, and proceeding gradually to thoſe which are more remote from the original ſenſe, though ſometimes the moſt uſual. The primitive ſignification of words may generally be known by their etymology, relation to their ſubject, or ſome parallel or oppoſite words adjoined to them. One or more Latin examples are added by way of confirmation to each ſignification, which are likewiſe ranged together in the ſame order as the Engliſh, and marked by figures; and the particular book, chapter, or verſe, wherein theſe paſſages in Roman authors ſo cited may be found, are for the moſt part carefully referred to. By this means the learner will have a much clearer knowledge of the true ſignification of every ſuch Latin word, than he poſſibly could have by thoſe books, wherein the different ſenſes have been ſet down under each word, as they have been occaſionally met with in Latin authors, whether proſe or verſe; and the conſultors, on any ſcruple, may with eaſe ſee, whether the author's words are truly repreſented and interpreted, which cannot be done without much ſearching and trouble in the method of general citations. Beſides, many ſenſes will occur herein not taken notice of in our Latin dictionaries; many idioms and phraſes are more clearly explained; ſeveral cuſtoms among the Romans better illuſtrated; and the grammatical conſtruction and government much more largely exemplified, and accounted for; ſo that ſome words, eſpecially Verbs having a variety of ſignifications, have run out into a much greater length, than one would at firſt think neceſſary in a book, wherein as much brevity, as was conſiſtent with the nature of the work, and completion of my deſign, hath always been carefully obſerved.

THE following words, when compared with the accounts given of them by others, will enable the reader to form a tolerable idea of the very great pains taken in ſettling this part of the work:

Agito,
ago,
appello,
bonum,
cado,
capio,
caput,
cauſa,
cenſeo,
clavus,
cohors,
colligo,
colo,
committo,
compono,
conficio,
copia,
corona,
curo,
deduco,
deſtino,
diſcedo,
duco,
effero,
explico,
facio,
fides,
fortis,
gratia,
habeo,

and teneo.

THERE is no need of acquainting the learned reader with the importance of ſuch paſſages in Latin authors, wherein two or more words are uſed to denote the ſame meaning, commonly known by the name of ſynonyma, or to denote a contrary meaning, called antitheta, in ſettling the true ſignification and force of words; but I think it proper to declare, that a much greater number of theſe hath been painfully collected, and inſerted in their proper places in this book, than can be met with in any, or all the Latin dictionaries now extant. Dr. Littleton hath attempted ſomething in this way, but hath rather followed what he found done by Nizolius, Scot, or others, in this matter, than made any collections from the claſſics themſelves; beſides, his placing theſe ſynonyms and oppoſites to words in general, and not as ſuch to any particular ſenſes of thoſe words, rendereth what hath been done by him of little or no ſervice. The ſynonyma are denoted by =, and the antitheta by ✠, according to Dr. Littleton's method.

BUT the application I have made of them in the following work, is very different from what others have done. For I have not only made a much larger collection of this ſort from all the claſſic writers, than had been done before; but have alſo applied them to illuſtrate and confirm the particular ſignifications of every word, where ever I could poſſibly find them: and have very often produced examples of both ſynonyma and antitheta to illuſtrate the ſame ſignification. If a variety of theſe occurred, I pitched upon ſuch, as, beſides the ideas of ſynonyms or oppoſites, contained the ſyntax, or ſome uſeful knowledge in morals or arts.

TO what uſes I have applied the ſynonyma may partly be ſeen in Abdico, as, ſo fugit and factis abdicat are uſed by Ovid to expreſs much the ſame idea;

abdomen, ſo ſumen and abdomen, as Pliny telleth us, ſignified the ſame thing;

abhorrens, ſo abſurdæ and abhorrentes are applied by Livy to denote much the ſame ſenſe; abjecte, ſo abjectè and timidè, ſordidiùs and abjectiùs are uſed by Cicero;

abjectio, ſo debilitatio and abjectio are uſed by the ſame author.

Examples of the latter, or the antitheta, occur in abalienatus, ſo abalienatum and retinuiſti are oppoſed by Cicero;
abalieno, ſo retinere and abalienârunt are uſed by the ſame author;
aberro, ſo redeat and aberravit, levor and aberro are uſed by the ſame author;
abjectio, ſo likewiſe abjectio and adjectio are oppoſed;
abjectus, thus abjectum and erexi are oppoſed;
abjudico, thus judicabit and abjudicabit are alſo applied.

It is needleſs to give more examples of theſe, almoſt every page abounding with them.

WITH regard to the CITATIONS from Latin authors in this work, and the name of the author annexed to any Latin word in general, I think it convenient to inform the public:

Firſt, THAT I have always endeavoured to ſhew a due regard to the dignity and eſtabliſhed character of the writer; never deſignedly quoting Quintilian, Curtius, Juſtin, Juvenal, or others of an inferior claſs, for words uſed by Cicero, Cæſar, Livy, Virgil, or other writers of the firſt rank; except in ſuch Latin examples, as contain a ſynonym or oppoſite, ſomething remarkable as to the grammatical conſtruction, or with regard to idioms, proverbs, maxims, and moral ſentences, or ſome uſeful knowledge therein contained. For which reaſon the quotations from the laſt named excellent authors, and thoſe from Plautus, Terence, Horace, Ovid, and Pliny, are very numerous in this part.

Secondly, THAT I have been particularly careful in noting all ſuch Latin Nouns, as have but one, two, or three caſes only among the claſſics; are defective or redundant in gender or number; or admit of different ſenſes in different numbers: and have produced ſuch authorities from the Roman writers, as would beſt prove and illuſtrate my obſervations. Examples of theſe may be ſeen in abies, acinus, acus, ædes, æther, ager, alex, antæ, arbitratus, arbitrium, and auxilium.

THE ſame method is obſerved with reſpect to the Comparative and Superlative degrees in Adjectives, Participials, and Adverbs. For having obſerved many miſtakes with regard to ſeveral of theſe, committed even by learned men, who have truſted too much either to analogy or grammar rules (agillimus in particular in our common Engliſh Accidents, and albior in the Latin Grammar, being falſely given as examples of compariſon) I have carefully and diſtinctly ſet down all the words of this ſort, which I have obſerved to be defective in one or other of the degrees of compariſon. Inſtances of theſe may be ſeen in abditus, abjectè, abſciſſior, abſolutiſſimè, accommodatè, accumulatiſſimè, aduſtior, æſtuoſius, affirmatè, affluens, affluentiùs, amarè, amarus, amicè, annoſus, argutè, aſſeveranter, and aſſuetus.

IN Verbs alſo notice is given of thoſe which are defective in perſon or tenſe, or when only read in ſome one perſon in a particular ſenſe; as in aio, attineo, and auſim.

Thirdly, THAT in citing the Latin claſſical authors, the following editions of them have been principally made uſe of:

Apuleius,	Delphini,
Auguſtæ hiſtoriæ ſcript.	Variorum,
Auſonius,	Variorum,
Boethius,	Delphini,
Cæſar,	Delphini,
Calpurnius,	Variorum,
Cato,	Commelini & Geſneri,
Catullus,	Cantabrigienſis,
Celſus,	Almeloveeni,
Ciceronis Opera,	Gronovii & Verburgii,
Claudianus,	Delphini,
Columella,	Commelini & Geſneri,
Curtius,	Pitiſci & Delphini,
Eutropius,	Delphini,
Firmicus,	Oiſelii,
Florus,	Delphini,
Frontinus,	Variorum,
Gellius,	Delphini,
Gratius,	Johnſoni,
Horatius,	Cantabrigienſis,
Juſtinus,	Grævii & Delphini,
Juvenalis,	Henninii & Delphini,
Lactantius,	Cellarii,
Livius,	Hearnii & Clerici,
Lucanus,	Variorum,
Lucretius,	Fabri & Creechii,
Macrobius,	Variorum,
Manilius,	Scaligeri & Delphini,
Marcellinus,	Gronovii,
Martialis,	Delphini,
Mela,	Gronovii,
Minucius Felix,	Variorum,
C. Nepos,	Variorum & Delphini,
Nemeſianus,	Variorum,
Ovidii Opera,	Delphini & Variorum,
Palladius,	Commelini & Geſneri,
Paterculus,	Delphini,
Perſius,	Delphini,
Petronius Arbiter,	Burmanni,
Phædrus,	Delphini & Bentleii,
Plautus,	Gronovii & Delphini,
Plinii Nat. Hiſtoria,	Delphini,
Plinii Epiſtolæ,	Cellarii,
Propertius,	Cantabrigienſis,
Prudentius,	Cellarii,
Quintilianus,	Gibſoni & Burmanni,
Salluſtius,	Waſſii & Delphini,
Scribonius Largus,	J. Rhodii,
Senecarum Opera,	Variorum,
Senecæ Tragœdiæ,	Schroderi,
Silius Italicus,	Drakenborchii & Cellarii,
Statius,	Variorum & Delphini,
Suetonius,	Gronovii & Ryckii,
Sulpitius Severus,	Variorum,
Tacitus,	Gronovii & Ryckii,
Terentius,	Delphini & Bentleii,
Tibullus,	Cantabrigienſis,
Valerius Flaccus,	Burmanni,
Valerius Maximus,	Torrenii,
Varro,	Scaligeri,
Vegetius,	Stewechii,
Aur. Victor,	Pitiſci,
Virgilius,	Delphini & Maſvicii,
Vitruvius,	De Laet.

IN ſome proſe writers there is a little difference with reſpect to the diviſions of the chapters, and their ſubdiviſions; wherefore the citations from Cicero in this work are made according to the larger diviſions: but in poets the book and verſe are near the ſame in all editions, except in Broukhuſius's celebrated editions of Propertius and Tibullus, which differ much in this reſpect from, I think, all others; for which reaſon I choſe to make my citations from thoſe authors according to the edition of them publiſhed at Cambridge in quarto.

Fourthly, THAT although I principally made uſe of the editions beforementioned, yet I have not confined myſelf wholly to them, or depended intirely on their authority. For where there was reaſon to ſuſpect their readings of any paſſage, I compared them with others in greater eſteem (of which a pretty large account is given in another place) and have generally ſet down the various readings of different editions, ſo far as I had occaſion to make uſe of them. Examples of various readings may be ſeen in abedo, abortus, a, um, abvolo, acanthis, accubatio, acetum, addocet, æſtuatio, ætas, afflictus, us, alacriter, aliquiſquam, allevior, altero, alutatio, amineus, amplificè, antecaptus, antiſtitor, apianus, apolecti, appetitio, armentinus, artocopus, aſſamenta, aſſimulor, and aucupatio. Beſides which, I have ſometimes ventured to ſet down my own opinion, conjecture, or ſuſpicion as to the reading of a place; as in acceſſor, adhorreſco, alabarches, amaritas, angelus, antefactum, appingo, arilator, and aſſentio.

MOREOVER, the reader may find many critical, and, as I hope they will be thought, uſeful obſervations in this work, not to be found, ſo far as I know, in any other book of this kind; particularly in a, abs, aborior, abſciſsè, abſimilis, abſque, acceſſus, adeps, adhibeo, admodum, ærumna, affectatus, age, agema, agnellus, alter, amo, ampliatio, analecta, anima, animadverſio, annotinus, apathia, apparitio, aquatio, arbor, arrhabo, arvum, aſpernatus, attamen, audaciter, aulicus, auſpicium, and autem. Theſe generally have a ☞ prefixed to them.

THE reader will obſerve, that in this account of what he may expect in this part of my dictionary, I have confined myſelf only to the firſt letter A; though the like care, and indeed greater (chiefly with reſpect to the references to the places in authors whence the citations are made) hath been taken in all the remaining letters; deſigning at firſt not to be ſo particular in this caſe, as I afterwards found it neceſſary to be.

VERY many diſtinctions made by the old Latin grammarians, and ſome moderns, as Auſonius Popma, and others, ſuch as humeri being appropriated to men, and armi to beaſts; and invenio, denoting to find things ſought for, reperio to find them by chance; though inſerted both in Littleton and Cambridge, I have intirely rejected in this work, becauſe they cannot be proved by examples from the claſſics; and the reader, I perſuade myſelf, by examining my account of thoſe words, will ſee I had juſt reaſon for ſo doing.

THE idioms and phraſes in this work are ranged under the particular ſenſes to which they belong, and not thrown confuſedly together after their Engliſh explications, as is done in moſt other Latin dictionaries. To theſe are prefixed the uſual mark ¶.

I THINK it almoſt needleſs to mention ſuch things as this dictionary hath in common with others, ſuch as the genders of Nouns, preterperfect tenſes of Verbs, the marking of the quantities of ſyllables, &c. But it may not be amiſs to tell the reader, that as I had Stephens's Latin Theſaurus, and other valuable dictionaries continually before me in compiling this work, it can hardly be ſuppoſed I could omit any ſignification of a Latin word fairly proved by them: and I doubt not but it will be found, on a careful examination, that I have given ſome ſenſes not taken notice of by them, though I have not accumulated ſo many authorities, but contented myſelf with one or two only, which, if well choſen, are more convenient for learners.

IN the orthography both of Engliſh and Latin words I have generally followed the cuſtom which moſt prevaileth amongſt us; but yet have not omitted to give my ſentiments under ſome particular words, concerning which my opinion differeth from that more commonly received, eſpecially with regard to the Latin; as may be ſeen in cœlum, femina, hæres, ſtilus, ſilva, &c.

IF, after a diligent ſearch into the authors referred to by the compilers of dictionaries, I could not find proper authorities for ſome Latin words; I choſe in dubious caſes to cite the authorities thus, Steph. Faber, Littl. &c. ex Cic. Plaut. &c. rather than utterly to reject them, in order to excite others to diligence, who in reading over the claſſics may caſually light upon thoſe paſſages, which have eſcaped my view.

IN turning over the many books neceſſary for carrying on and compleating this deſign, and ſettling the ſeveral authorities and different ſenſes of the Latin words in a method never before uſed in our Latin dictionaries, it is no wonder that ſome omiſſions and miſtakes have happened, which I am now too ſenſible of, when it is too late to mend them all; but ſome few are of ſuch conſequence, that I think it needful to give notice of them in the addenda and corrigenda prefixed to this work; and the reſt I hope will be candidly imputed to ſuch overſights, as are unavoidable in a work of this nature.

I DESIRE it may be obſerved, that the words ſynonyma, antitheta, metaph. &c. are deſignedly uſed in the largeſt ſenſe thoſe words are capable of, to prevent ſome inconveniencies which might have enſued the making uſe of ſome other words of the like ſenſe.

IN the Latin part, with which I began, after a careful and attentive peruſal of the learned diſſertations of the reverend Dr. Littleton, prefixed to the ſeveral letters of the alphabet, wherein he accurately treateth of their original, figure, name, and power, their diſtributions, and orders, from which their frequent changes into each other to ſoften or raiſe the ſound, proceed (all which notices are ſo uſeful and even neceſſary in any tongue, particularly in etymologies, orthography, and proſody, that in them all ancient grammarians have laid the foundation of their works) I at firſt deſigned to publiſh them, with the addition of ſome remarks of my own, in a different character; but afterwards conſidering that the more uſeful they were, ſo much the leſs they ought to be writ in a tongue young ſcholars muſt be ſuppoſed to be ignorant of, I concluded to write my diſſertations in Engliſh. This I have the rather done, becauſe ſeveral remarks therein may be of uſe to Engliſh readers likewiſe, being a kind of Rationale as well of the Engliſh, as Latin tongue.

BUT it is time to proceed to the laſt part of this work, in the account of which I ſhall be very brief.

III. IN the hiſtorical and poetical part I have confined myſelf to ſuch matters only, as are proper to the ſubjects they are deſigned to explain; namely perſons, places, remarkable events, and the mythology occurring in the claſſic authors; and have pointed out the ſeveral places in the writers, where they may be found. The ancient geography hath been ſettled chiefly from thoſe excellent performances of Harduin in his notes upon Pliny, and Cellarius's larger work upon that ſubject.

I THOUGHT it needleſs to inſert the maps of Rome or Italy in this place, both becauſe the ſcale of maps of the ſame ſize as this book would have been abundantly too ſmall to convey any uſeful and juſt knowledge of thoſe places, and becauſe there is lately publiſhed in octavo Cellarius's Geographia antiqua, with maps and proper indexes accommodated to the uſe of grammar ſchools.

THE Appendages to this part are:

1. THE Roman Calendar with notes: of which I have ſpoken more particularly in the Latin preface prefixed to it.

2. THE coins, weights, and meaſures uſed by the Romans: the knowledge of which is certainly very uſeful, and it requireth much time and application to be well acquainted with them; but the value and capacity of them are ſo well explained already by the late Dr. Arbuthnot, that I have contented myſelf in this place with giving only a ſummary calculation of them from the tables of that ingenious and learned author. Some farther account of theſe may be ſeen under their proper heads in the claſſical part of this book.

3. THE chronology: which, in a claſſical dictionary, I think, ought not to be intermixed with eccleſiaſtical affairs. The beſt account of the Roman conſuls, and other chief officers of Rome, is, in the opinion of ſome friends of mine, that printed at Amſterdam in MDCCV, by Almeloveen, which I have therefore chiefly followed. As this part is moſtly deſigned for the uſe of thoſe who have made ſome advances in the learned languages, I think it proper to be in Latin only.

4. THE notes of abbreviation uſed by the Romans. Some of theſe I had inſerted in my diſſertations on the ſeveral letters of the alphabet, and deſigned not to place them here; but being perſuaded by friends, that a fuller account of them might be uſeful to ſome perſons in reading ancient coins and inſcriptions, I have given them from the Breviarium of Sertorius Urſatus.

5. THE Law Latin dictionary: which, though not ſo perfect as was once propoſed, before the proceedings in law were confined by parliament to the Engliſh tongue; yet I flatter myſelf will be found more uſeful for the underſtanding records and forms of law written or printed in that language, than any of this kind before publiſhed.

I COULD wiſh this book had been printed on a larger character, for the ſake of ſome gentlemen, who may be diſcouraged from making uſe of it, becauſe of the ſmallneſs of the letter; but it being deſigned chiefly for the uſe of our Britiſh youth, I preſume it will be thought large enough for that purpoſe.

THUS having brought the labour of many years to a period, and given the public a faithful account of what may be expected from this work; I hope no perſon will be ſo uncharitable, as to impute any thing ſaid in relation to the preſent Latin dictionaries to a deſign of caſting reflexions on the memories of their authors; but that it will be looked upon, as it is true in fact, to be done only with a view of juſtifying myſelf to the world for publiſhing this performance.

THE aſſiſtance I have had from the Dauphin and other indexes to the claſſics, I freely acknowledge; but am in a particular manner obliged to thoſe correct editions and uſeful indexes which have been publiſhed by the learned author of the claſſical Indices.

I LIKEWISE acknowledge myſelf to have been much aſſiſted in this toilſome and tedious work by the learned and induſtrious Mr. Samuel Patrick, the editor of Hederic's Lexicon, who hath taken no ſmall pains in correcting and improving this dictionary.

To conclude, as I am far from deſiring to cenſure the performances of others, and would not, when forced to ſay ſome things in vindication of myſelf, be thought ſo to do; ſo I hope no perſon will caſt reflexions on me, who have no other deſign in publiſhing this book, than to be ſerviceable in propagating uſeful knowledge among my own countrymen, for whoſe good I heartily wiſh it were much more compleat than it is. But this I hope will not be denied me by competent judges, that the method taken herein is the beſt plan towards a compleat Latin dictionary, that hath yet appeared in our language.

THE

TO THE

SECOND EDITION.

AS Mr. Ainſworth, the author of this Dictionary, died ſince the former edition of it was publiſhed; I hope it will not be unacceptable to the reader to ſee a ſhort account of his life, as well as a true narrative, how this work was begun, carried on, and brought to its preſent ſtate.

MR. ROBERT AINSWORTH was born at Woodyale in the pariſh of Eccles, four miles from Mancheſter in the county of Lancaſter, September 1660, and was educated at Bolton in that county, and afterwards taught ſchool in the ſame town.

Some years after he came to London, and was maſter of a conſiderable boarding ſchool at Bethnal Green, at which time he wrote and publiſhed a ſhort treatiſe of grammatical inſtitution. From thence he removed to Hackney, and afterwards to other places near London, where he taught with good reputation many years, when having acquired a moderate fortune he left off, and lived privately. He had likewiſe a turn both for Latin and Engliſh poetry, and ſome ſingle poems of his have been printed in each of thoſe languages. He died at London, April 4, 1743, aged 83, and was buried, according to his own deſire, in the cemetery of Poplar, under the following monumental inſcription compoſed by himſelf.

ROB. AINSWORTH ET UXOR EJUS ADMODUM SENES
DORMITURI VESTEM DETRITAM HIC EXUERUNT, NOVAM PRIMO MANE SURGENTES INDUTURI.

DUM FAS, MORTALIS, SAPIAS, ET RESPICE FINEM.
HOC SUADENT MANES, HOC CANIT AMRAMIDES.

TO THY REFLEXION, MORTAL FRIEND,
TH' ADVICE OF MOSES I COMMEND:
BE WISE AND MEDITATE THY END *.

ABOUT the year 1714 a propoſal was made to ſome eminent bookſellers of London, for compiling a new Compendious Engliſh and Latin Dictionary, upon the ſame ſcheme with Faber's Theſaurus, which was approved of. And it coming then under conſideration, what perſon of ſufficient ability and leiſure could be found, and prevailed on, to undertake ſo laborious and extenſive a work, Mr. Ainſworth was mentioned, as a proper perſon for ſuch a deſign. And upon their acquainting him with it, he ſoon after undertook it; and how well it has been executed, may beſt appear, from the general approbation the firſt edition has met with from the public.

While this work was preparing, the execution of it was attended with ſo many difficulties, that it went on very ſlowly for a long time, and for ſome years was intirely ſuſpended. But afterwards, on account of Mr. Ainſworth's advanced age, and a diſorder that affected his eyes, I was deſired to aſſiſt in reviewing the copy; and at his requeſt, and the bookſellers concerned, accepted of it, after about a dozen ſheets had been wrought off; which may ſerve as an apology not only for the ſmallneſs of the print, but likewiſe for the defects in the beginning of the Latin part, particularly in omitting the references to the ſeveral authors, occaſioned by the brevity at firſt deſigned; as it was then chiefly intended for a ſchool book, which view was afterward enlarged by adding the authorities. In the proſecution of this province therefore it was neceſſary to conſult the authors themſelves, and point out the particular places, as near as poſſible, from whence the ſeveral quotations were taken. And for this end I furniſhed myſelf with all ſuch editions of the Latin claſſics, as might moſt readily direct me to find out the ſeveral authorities referred to, or examine the correctneſs of the text; both which purpoſes can rarely be anſwered by one edition of the ſame writer. And thus much may ſuffice for the former edition.

AS to what reſpects this new edition, I ſhall give an account of it in the order of the ſeveral parts of the work.

I. NOTWITHSTANDING the great pains taken in the firſt edition, and the almoſt infinite labour of finding out the ſeveral paſſages taken from Roman authors, and comparing of different editions; many things occurred too late to be inſerted in their proper places, which however I carefully endeavoured to note, and have ſupplied in this edition. Moreover, to render the Latin part more compleat, I found it neceſſary to read over ſeveral of the Latin claſſics, particularly that illuſtrious but too much neglected hiſtorian Livy, who has furniſhed a great many words not before inſerted in any book of this ſort; as alſo Silius Italicus, Cornelius Celſus, Columella, and ſeveral others; ſo that no pains have been ſpared in order to improve this work in that reſpect.

And further, a great number of Participles not occurring in any former dictionaries, and collected by my own obſervation, are here introduced. Theſe are ſo very numerous, that there are few pages, in which ſeveral inſtances of them may not be found, and therefore need not be particularly ſpecified. Beſides which, the reader will meet with a great many principal Latin Verbs in their paſſive ſenſe, which was before omitted.

II. AS to what has been done in the Engliſh Latin part, beſides correcting ſome faults, which eſcaped notice in the former edition, and the addition of many words and phraſes therein omitted; having conſulted a very valuable manuſcript of the late learned Mr. Samuel Morland, in five volumes in folio, which furniſhed me with a large number of Engliſh and Latin phraſes not to be found before in any dictionary, I have inſerted as many of them, as was conſiſtent with the brevity and expedition required in this edition. And what has before been generally neglected in works of this nature, but I hope will be of ſervice to the more curious, the very words of the ſeveral authors, with particular references to the paſſages cited in more difficult deſcriptions of places and things, are here introduced; a few inſtances of which the reader may obſerve under the following words:

to aſk the price,
a garret,
a garter,
to get aſide,
to get, or ſpread abroad,
to get gain,
to have a buſineſs in hand,
the heart,
to keep open houſe,
ill at eaſe, or ſick,
to inſinuate one's ſelf into another's favour,
intent,
a law,
natural,
to offer one's ſervice,
to offer battle,
an office, or public charge,
to manage an office,
an opinion,
opportunity,
to be in pain, or be pained,
pardon,
a perſon of good parts,
a party, or faction,
to pay,
to perpetuate,
plentifulneſs, or plenty,
a plot, or deſign,
to gain, or carry one's point,
to poll more men,
power,
quarter,
a quota,
to redreſs grievances,
to remember,
ſafe,
to ſcruple, or make a ſcruple of,
to ſhew,
ſhort,
the ſight,
to ſignify,
ſlippery,
the ſoul,
a ſtranger,
a year.

And what was obſerved to be of conſiderable conſequence, care has been generally taken to ſubjoin no Latin words to the preceding Engliſh, but what may be found in the Latin part: a neglect of which, in all the dictionaries of this ſort hitherto publiſhed among us, has been of very ill conſequence to young perſons in their choice of words, and forming a Latin ſtile; for which reaſon it was thought requiſite, that the Latin part ſhould be firſt printed.

And becauſe ſome have thought, that too few etymologies were before inſerted; I have added ſeveral new ones, taken chiefly from Mr. Morland, whoſe ſagacity in that reſpect was very remarkable.

Many critical obſervations on particular words will likewiſe be found, in the manner of Faber, Doletus, Stephanus, and other writers of that ſort; as in

abutor,
accido,
adcredo,
addere,
adducere,

with many more, through the whole alphabet, too numerous to be recited here; and therefore theſe are to be conſidered as given only by way of ſpecimen.

I have added alſo ſeveral examples from authors before omitted, as the reader may ſee under

abſonus,
acciſus,
allatro,
alluvies,
antiquo,
appeto,
aſſolet,
audientia,
cæmentum,
cataracta,
cauſarius,
conſciſco, &c.

Likewiſe ſeveral illuſtrations of difficult places from the beſt commentators now extant may be found through the work.

Beſides theſe things, I have carefully examined many ſuſpected words, uſually denoted in the former edition by Litt. ex Plaut. Liv. etc. for many of which good authorities are now cited, which have ſince occurred; and others, ſuppoſed to be good, upon examination appeared not to be ſo, which are diſtinguiſhed with their proper marks.

To the many advantages hitherto mentioned in this part of the work, the reader will likewiſe meet with ſeveral hundred words, and additional ſenſes of others, taken from claſſic writers, not to be found in other Latin dictionaries; which were communicated for the improvement of this edition by Mr. Profeſſor Ward of Greſham-College, and have generally this mark ☞ prefixed to them.

III. IN the Latin proper part, beſides correcting ſome miſtakes, which eſcaped in the former edition, citations are given out of the Roman poets, chiefly to denote the quantity, where it was dubious; which has been too much neglected in moſt books of this kind.

I HAVE further to add, that ſome editions of the Latin claſſics having been either publiſhed ſince the former edition of this dictionary, or at leaſt come to my hand ſince that time, I have diligently peruſed them alſo; amongſt which are,

Auctores Rei ruſticæ,	Geſneri,	Manilius,	Bentleii,
Auſonius,	Delphini,	Ovidius,	Burmanni,
Celſus,	J. B. Morgani,	Plinii Ep.	Cortii,
Livius,	Crevier,	Quintilianus,	Capperonnerii,
Lucanus,	Oudendorpii,	Terentius,	Weſterhovii.

AS this edition is printed upon a larger type, and in a more diſtinct manner than the former; it is to be hoped, that theſe advantages, beſides the improvements above mentioned, will ſerve to recommend it to the favour of the public.

Charter-Houſe,

S. PATRICK.

OF THE

Different AGES relating to the PURITY of the LATIN TONGUE.

THOUGH the origin, growth, flouriſhing ſtate, and decay of the Latin tongue may, in my opinion, be moſt properly repreſented by the different ages of man, as infancy, youth, manhood, and old age: yet, ſince thoſe periods of time have been more uſually diſtinguiſhed by metals of greater or leſs fineneſs, as gold, ſilver, braſs, and iron; I chooſe to keep to the method of digeſting them preſcribed by others, rather than ſeem too fond of my own opinion, by introducing a new way of my own.

The golden age in this caſe is generally computed from the time of the ſecond Punic war, to the latter end of the reign of Auguſtus Cæſar, and comprehendeth the oldeſt authors in the Latin tongue now extant, excepting the fragments of Livius Andronicus. Though for a conſiderable time after the commencement of this period, the language was but yet forming, and by gradual improvements afterwards arrived to its ſtate of perfection under Auguſtus.

The ſilver age is reckoned to have commenced on the death of Auguſtus, and continued to the end of Trajan's reign.

The braſen age began at the death of Trajan, and laſted till the time that Rome was taken by the Goths, about four hundred and ten years after the birth of Chriſt.

The iron age commenced from the ſacking of Rome before-mentioned, after which the purity of the Latin tongue was very much neglected, and multitudes of barbarous words and forms of expreſſion introduced, to the great diſparagement of that noble language.

How rude and unpoliſhed this tongue was in its infant ſtate, appeareth from hence, that the hymns of the Saliar prieſts inſtituted by Numa, were ſcarcely underſtood by the prieſts themſelves, who were cotemporary with the flouriſhing times, as Fabius telleth us, Inſt. Orat. 1, 6. And the decemviral, and pontifical laws had nothing of that beautiful diction, which may be obſerved in the writings of the Auguſtan age.

Ennius the poet is alſo deſcribed by Ovid, Triſt. 2, 424, as ingenio maximus, arte rudis. And Cæcilius is ſaid by Tully ad Att. 7, 3, to be malus Latinitatis auctor.

But in after-times the Romans took great pains in poliſhing their native language, and even Cæſar himſelf, when otherwiſe engaged in buſineſs of great moment, writ a book relating to the ſpeaking of Latin accurately, and declareth therein, verborum delectum originem eſſe eloquentiæ, Cic. de Clar. Orat. 72. Cæſar, Cicero the father of the Roman eloquence, Cornelius Nepos, Varro, Salluſt, and Livy, may juſtly be reckoned the greateſt writers in proſe, and Plautus, Terence, Lucretius, Virgil, Horace, and Ovid, the greateſt poets; who all lived in the golden age.

Celſus, Paterculus, Columella, Curtius, Tacitus, Pliny the hiſtorian, Suetonius, and ſome other proſe writers, flouriſhed in the ſilver age; and Perſius, Lucan, Silius Italicus, Valerius Flaccus, Juvenal, and Martial among the poets; and the two Seneca's diſtinguiſhed themſelves by their writings on moral and other ſubjects.

Juſtin; Ælius Spartianus, with the other writers of the Auguſtan hiſtory; Eutropius, Vegetius, Macrobius, and Aurelius Victor, writers in proſe; Nemeſianus, Auſonius, Prudentius, and Claudian, poets, lived in the braſen age, and were a conſiderable ornament to it.

Though it is uſual to judge of the diction of the Roman writers by the age they lived in, yet that this may admit of ſome exceptions is evident from hence, that Vitruvius, who writ even in the Auguſtan age, ſinketh in ſome places far below the diction of his cotemporaries; and the ſtile of Valerius Maximus, the writers of the Hiſtoriæ Auguſtæ, Ammianus Marcellinus, and Apuleius, is much worſe than of ſome others who lived in their times; and yet ſeveral lawyers, as Æmilius, Papinian, Ulpian, and others, writ in a good Latin ſtile under Alexander Severus; and even Lactantius, a Chriſtian, writ good Latin in the reign of Conſtantine, Sulpitius Severus in the time of Honorius, Claudian the poet in the time of Severus, yea and long after, under Theodoric the Goth, Boethius, a man of conſular dignity, wrote in ſo pure a Roman ſtile, that if we were ignorant of the age he lived in, we ſhould take him for a cotemporary of Cicero.

In after-times the beauty of the Latin tongue declined very much, and many baſe words were introduced into the language, eſpecially by the eccleſiaſtic and phyſical writers, the uſe of which ought to be carefully avoided by all perſons ſtudious of writing in a good Latin ſtile. The ſureſt way of obtaining which, is carefully to read, make obſervations upon, and imitate the pureſt Latin writers, eſpecially thoſe who come the neareſt to Cicero, to whoſe valuable writings this language is very much indebted.

An Explication of the ſeveral MARKS uſed in this WORK.

In the firſt, or Engliſh and Latin part:

THE Declenſions of Noun Subſtantives are denoted only by the figures 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, except in ſuch as may occaſion any difficulty to young ſcholars as to the Gender, or Genitive caſe ſingular; in which words both the Gender and Genitive caſe are ſet down.

The Conjugations of Verbs are denoted in the ſame manner, with the like reſtriction.

In the ſecond and third parts:

The different Engliſh ſignifications of the Latin words are denoted by figures, as well as the Latin authorities.

The figures after an author's name, where there are only two figures, denote the book, chapter, or verſe; and where three, the third denoteth the ſection, or ſubdiviſion.

In all the parts:

† Prefixed to a word denoteth it to be obſolete.

‖ Before a word denoteth it to be bad, or uſed only by writers of an inferior claſs.

* Before a word ſheweth it to be of Greek extraction.

¶ Is prefixed to phraſes and idioms.

§ Denoteth the grammatical conſtruction.

✠ Before a word ſheweth it to be poetical.

⸸ Is put before good Latin words ſubſtituted in the room of Greek, or bad Latin words.

═ Prefixed to a word, or ſentence, ſheweth that the words, or two words in that ſentence, are much of the ſame import.

⌘ Before a word, or ſentence, ſheweth that the words, or two words in that ſentence, are uſed in an oppoſite, or different ſenſe.

═ ⌘ Denote that there are words both of the ſame and oppoſite ſenſe in the ſame ſentence.

☞ Denoteth ſomething remarkable as to the uſe and conſtruction of a word.

¯ Over a Vowel ſheweth that ſyllable to be long.

˘ Over a Vowel denoteth that ſyllable to be ſhort.

Rar. occ. for raro occurrit; vix alibi, or neſcio an alibi; denote that the word is ſeldom to be met with.

ſ. q. for ſed quære, expreſſing a doubt.

q. v. for quod vide, or ſee the word referred to.

LINGUÆ LATINÆ
COMPENDIARII
PARS PRIMA.

A, or an, An indefinite particle, denoting almoſt the ſame as one, is generally expreſſed in Latin by putting the Noun only in the ſingular number, as a dog, canis; unleſs before Nouns of number, as many a man, multi, the word homines being underſtood, though more uſually omitted, as ſufficiently denoted by the maſculine gender of the Adjective. In Engliſh this particle is commonly placed before the Adjective, as a ſtout man, fortis.

A clock, for of, or by the clock, Hora prima, ſecunda, & ſic de cæteris.

As [implying time of action] Dum, ut, cum, in, ubi, ſuper, inter, &c. As I ſtood at the door, dum ante oſtium ſto. As the money was paying down, the man happened to come in on a ſudden, ut numerabatur fortè argentum, intervenit homo de improviſo. As I was folding up this letter, cum complicarem hanc epiſtolam. As I was going into the nurſery, ubi in gynecæum ire occipio. He ſtudieth as he is travelling, in itinere ſecum ipſe meditatur. Had this befallen you as you were at ſupper, ſi inter cœnam hoc tibi accidiſſet. Theſe things did he talk as we were at ſupper, hæc ille dixit ſuper cœnam. ‡ And as he flew he looked down upon the fields, agroſque volans deſpectabat.

As [in compariſons, and anſwering to ſuch, ſo, &c.] is made by Qui or qualis. Nor are we ſuch as enemies cannot defame, neque enim ii ſumus, quos vituperare ne inimici quidem poſſint. Shew yourſelf now to be ſuch a one, as you have already ſhewn yourſelf before, præbe te talem hoc tempore, qualem te jam antea præbuiſti.

As, in one part of a ſentence anſwering to ſo in the other, is made by Atque, quemadmodum, quomodo, ſicut, ita, velut, ut. So [or ſuch] ſhall be the end of felicity as it was before, ſimilis erit finis boni, atque antea fuerat. If this be ſo full as I ſay, ſi plenum ſit hoc quemadmodum dico. You have ſo made me conſul as few have been made in this city, ita me feciſtis conſulem, quomodo pauci in hac civitate facti ſunt. As you ſaid, ſo it fell out, ſicut dîxti, ita evenit. From which judgement he eſcaped naked as from a fire, quo ex judicio velut ex incendio nudus effugit. As that was troubleſome, ſo this is pleaſant, ut illud erat moleſtum, ſic hoc eſt jucundum. Should he be ſo fooliſh as to truſt me? an ille tam eſſet ſtultus quam mihi crederet?

As, in the latter clauſe of a ſentence anſwering to ſo, or as great, much, little, ſoon, faſt, &c. is made by Quam, quantus, qui, or ut, with a ſuperlative; as, Let the buſineſs be diſpatched as ſoon, and with as little trouble as may be, quam primum & quam minima cum moleſtia res tranſigatur. As great honour as might be was given to the gods, diis, quantus maximus poterat, habitus eſt honos. I ran away as faſt as I could, ego me in pedes quantum queo conjeci. I commended you to him as diligently as I could, ſic ei te commendavi, ut graviſſimè, diligentiſſiméque potui. I ſhew you as much reſpect as can be, quâ poſſum veneratione maximâ te proſequor. He accoſteth the man as courteouſly as poſſible, appellat hominem quàm blandiſſimè poteſt. I have ſet forth the oracles as briefly as I could, expoſui quam breviſſimè potui oracula.

As, redoubled with an adverb or adjective betwixt, and the particles, it is, they be, &c. after it, is made by Quamlibet or quamvis. As rich as you are, he careth not a pin for you, non enim pili facit te quamlibet divitem. As if it were any hard matter for me to name them, as many as they are, quaſi vero mihi difficile ſit, quamvis multa nominatim proferre.

Sometimes it is put for howſoever, and is made by Quantuſcunque or quantuluſcunque. All this, as great as it is, is thine, totum hoc, quantumcunque eſt, tuum eſt. By this which I ſay, as little as it is, may be judged, ex eo quod dico, quantulum id cunque eſt, judicari poteſt. As wiſe a man as any in our city, ſapiens homo cum primis noſtræ civitatis.

As is ſometimes put for in this regard, or reſpect, and then is made by Ut, qua, or tanquam. I will purſue him to the death, not as a juſt enemy, but as a poiſonous murderer, ad internecionem mihi perſequendus eſt, non ut juſtus hoſtis, ſed ut percuſſor veneficus. He is not valued as he is any man's ſon, but as he is a man, non quà filius alicujus, ſed quà homo æſtimatur. And commanded to ſpeak not as a ſenator, but as a perſon accuſed, juſſumque dicere non tanquam ſenatorem, ſed tanquam reum.

As, anſwering to ſo or as, where equality is intimated, or compariſon of one thing with another, is made by Æquè ac, æquè atque, æquè quam; tam, quam; non, haud, or nihilo minus, quam. What profit would there be to ſpeak of in proſperity, without a man had ſome body as well to rejoice at it as himſelf? Quis eſſet tantus fructus in proſperis rebus, niſi haberes qui illis, æquè ac tu ipſe, gauderet? Theſe benefits are not to be accounted ſo great, as thoſe, which, hæc beneficia æquè magna non ſunt habenda, atque ea, quæ. They can ſee as well by night as by day, noctibus æquè quàm die cernunt. He is afraid of harm as much as any of you, non minus quàm veſtrûm quivis formidat malum. I thought he made as great account of her as of himſelf, quam ego intellexi haud minus quam ſeipſum magni facere. He is in as great miſery, as he that, nihilo minus in miſeria eſt quàm ille qui. ¶ I loved you as my own brother, te in germani fratris dilexi loco. ¶ They are as very fools, pari ſtultitiâ ſunt.

As, ſignifying accordingly, or proportionably as, is made by Ut, uti, ſicut, ta ut, pro, prout, pro eo ac, pro eo atque, perinde ut, perinde atque, proindè, proinde ac, utcunque, &c. As you deſerve, ut meruiſti. As you ſay, uti dicis. He fled to his houſe as to an altar, ſicut in aram confugit in hujus domum. I loved him as my own, amavi pro meo. As every one pleaſeth, prout cuique libido eſt. As I ought, pro eo ut debui. It muſt be accounted of as done by no right, pro eo habendum eſt atque ſi nullo jure factum eſſet. As I ſhall tell you, perinde ut dicam. He did not ſeem to apprehend it, as I had thought, non, perinde atque ego putâram, arripere viſus eſt. He is not hated as he deſerveth, quem nequaquam, perinde ac dignus eſt, oderunt homines. As occaſion ſhall be, pro re nata. As there ſhall be need of ſpeaking, utcunque opus fuerit verbis.

As [which or which thing] Quod, id quod. She did as her mother bid her, Mater quod ſuaſit ſua fecit. But if our country do affect us, as it ſhould very much, at ſi nos, id quod maximè debet, noſtra patria dilexit.

As is ſometimes uſed for if. As you love me, Si me ames. As I live, ſi vivo.

As ſure as can be, Quàm certiſſimè.

As for, or as to, De, quatenus, quantum, quod ad, ad. As to the keeping our liberty I agree with you, de libertate retinenda tibi aſſentior. As for what he ſpake of religion, quatenus de religione ne dicebat. As far as I could apprehend, quantum aſſequi potui. As for Pomponius, quod ad Pomponium. I will do that which, as to the ſeverity of it, ſhall be more mild, and, as to the common ſafety, more profitable, faciam id, quod eſt ad ſeveritatem lenius, ad communem ſalutem utilius.

As being, Ut, utpote, quippe, ſcilicet. As being one to whom very great ſorrow came by his death, ut ad quem ſummus mœror morte ſuâ veniebat. A people that may be numbred as being ſmall, populus numerabilis, utpote parvus. Democritus, as being a learned man, thinketh the ſun to be of a great compaſs, ſol Democrito magnus videtur, quippe homini erudito. And as I, being a very wiſe man, preſently underſtood, ego, ſcilicet homo prudentiſſimus, ſtatim intellexi.

As far as, Qua, quantum, quoad, uſque, uſque ad, uſque eo. As far as one could ſee, qua viſus erat. As far as is in my power, quantum ſitum eſt in nobis. As far as poſſible, quoad ejus fieri poteſt. As far as Rome, Romam uſque. As far as the works, uſque ad molem. As far as ſhall be needful, uſque eo quo opus erit.

As if, as though, Quaſi, perinde quaſi, perinde ac ſi, tanquam, ut ſi, tanquam qui, tanquam ſi, non ſecus ac ſi, juxta ac ſi, ita ut ſi. As if his life lay at ſtake, quaſi vitæ diſcrimen agatur. You require that we ſhould confirm that as though it were done by our order, poſtulas ut id, perinde quaſi factum ſit noſtro judicio, confirmemus. They trembled, as if they had been ſurprized by an ambuſh, perinde, ac ſi inſidiis circumventi fuiſſent, trepidârunt. She fought as if ſhe had no mind to conquer, ita pugnabat tanquam quæ vincere nollet. That they ſhould ſalute him as though he had been conſul, ut iſtum, tanquam ſi eſſet conſul, ſalutarent. This is all one as if I ſhould ſay, hoc perinde eſt tanquam ſi ego dicam. As if you were my own brother, non ſecus ac ſi frater meus eſſes. As if he had been my own brother, juxta ac ſi meus frater eſſet. As though he had known nothing of the matter, ita ut ſi rem iſtam non nôſſet. ¶ He maketh as though he had been willing, diſſimulat ſe voluiſſe.

As it were, Ut, ceu, quaſi, tanquam.

As long as, Quamdiu, tamdiu, tantiſper dum, quoad, uſque dum, dum. You ſhall learn as long as you will, diſces quamdiu voles. He lived in the city as long as he could conveniently, vixit tamdiu quam licuit in civitate beatè vivere. As long as you oblige him, dum huic obſequare. I muſt play leaſt in ſight as long as the matter is undecided, latendum eſt tantiſper dum negotium non confectum fuerit. Do not forbear writing to me, as long as you can conveniently do it, quoad ejus facere poteris, ne intermittas ſcribere ad me. As long as they live, uſque dum vivunt. I gave as long as I had it, dedi dum fuit.

As big as, as bad as, Inſtar. As big as a book, inſtar voluminis. They think it as bad as death, inſtar mortis putant.

As many as, Tot, totidem, quotquot, quodcunque. As many years as he has lived, tot annos quot habet. There are as many changes of voices as of minds, vocis mutationes totidem ſunt quot animorum. As many as there be, quotquot erunt. As many ſoldiers as you can get together, quodcunque militum contrahere poteritis. ¶ Twice as many as the number of ſervants requireth, duplicia quam numerus ſervorum exigit.

As much, Tantùm. Though I loſe as much more, etiamſi alterum tantum perdendum ſit. ¶ Who ought to uſe things as much or more, quem pariter uti his decuit, aut etiam amplius. ¶ Add as much as you will thereto, it will keep to its kind, quantumcunque eo addideris, in ſuo genere manebit. ¶ They are as much to blame, ſimili ſunt in culpa, tam ſunt in vitio. ¶ As much as lay in me, quod quidem in me fuit. ¶ We have done as much as we promiſed and undertook, ſatisfactum eſt promiſſo noſtro ac accepto. ¶ I will do as much for you, reddam vicem, reddetur opera. ¶ Which is as much as any plaintiff can deſire, quod eſt accuſatori maximè optandum. ¶ He made as much account of the good will of his own freemen, as of his own credit, voluntatem municipum tantidem, quanti fidem ſuam fecit.

As much as ever, Ut cùm maximè, quantus maximè. The houſe is as much celebrated as ever, domus celebratur ita ut cùm maximè. I will ſpeak with as much brevity as ever I can, dicam quantâ maximè brevitate potero.

As often as, Quotieſcunque, toties quoties. As often as I ſpeak, quotieſcunque dico. As often as it is commanded, toties quoties præcipitur.

As ſoon as, Ubi, cum, cùm primum, ut, ſimul ac, ſimul ut, ſimul atque.

As ſoon as ever, Ubi primum, ut primum, cum primum, ſimul ac primum, ſtatim ut.

As well as, ut, tam quam, æque ac. I will bear it as well as I can, ut potero feram. I love thee as well as myſelf, tam te diligo quam meipſum. If they could endure our vices as well as our commands, ſi tam vitia noſtra quàm imperia ferre potuiſſent. As well as I, æquè mecum, juxta mecum, mecum pariter. They can ſee as well by night as by day, noctibus æquè quàm die cernunt. ¶ He thinketh no body can do as well as himſelf, nihil niſi quod ipſe facit rectum putat.
